Race Wires for District Area Cut Off

Sales Tax Passes House; Bill Now Goes to Senate

Vote of 216 to 180 Reverses Stand of 2 Weeks Ago; Food, Medicine Exempt

(Roll Call on Page 11)

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 216-to-180 House roll call vote yesterday forwarded the 2 per cent District sales tax bill to the Senate, where the District Committee will take it up Tuesday.

House approval of the sales levy reversed its stand two weeks ago, when it voted 176 to 166 to kill a similar measure.

Representatives Smith (D., Va.) and Bates (R., Mass.) steered the 18-million-dollar city revenue measure to passage on the second try.

As cleared by the House, the sales tax applies generally to all tangible property sold at retail unless specifically exempted. Main exemptions are food for home consumption, prescription medicines, and items costing 13 cents or less.

Method of Taxing

Articles costing from 14 to 63 cents inclusive would be taxed 1 cent; those from 64 cents to $1.13 inclusive would be taxed 2 cents, and there would be an extra penny tax for each extra 50 cents of the purchase price.

While customers would pay the specific tax, city collection from merchants would be on the basis of their gross receipts, rather than the actual tax the merchants collect from the public.

If finally enacted, the revenue bill would raise the money to restore major portions of the four-million-dollar House cuts in the city budget for the year starting July 1, to pay $330 salary increases to city employes, retroactive to last July. The pay legislation and budget are now before Congress.

Voting for the bill were 103 Democrats and 113 Republicans; voting against it were 133 Democrats, 46 Republicans, and 1 American Laborite. Three members voted present. The final vote backed up a preliminary roll call which rejected, 218 to 177, a motion to send the measure back to the District Committee. Two members voted present on the recommittal move.

25 Change Minds

Sixteen Republicans and nine Democrats who voted two weeks ago against the sales tax voted for the measure yesterday; one Democrat and one Republican switched from voting for the sales tax two weeks ago to voting against it yesterday. Forty members who missed the vote two weeks ago turned up to vote against the sales tax yesterday. Thirty-six others who did not vote two weeks ago turned up to vote for the bill.

Ten members who voted against the bill two weeks ago did not vote yesterday, and nine who voted for it two weeks ago did not vote yesterday. Three other members, listed two weeks ago against the sales tax bill, answered "present" yesterday because they were paired with absent members.

Soviet Shifts Sokolovsky to Cabinet Seat

London, (Wednesday), March 30 (U.P.).—Russia in its second big shakeup in military leadership in five days relieved Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky of his duties as commander-in-chief in Germany today and named him first deputy minister for the armed forces.

Named to replace Sokolovsky in Germany was Army Gen. Vassily I. Chuikov, another World War II hero, who had served under him as Soviet military administration chief for Thuringia.

News of the shift was broadcast by the Moscow Radio in the form of a communique of the Soviet council of ministers, the cabinet.

Speculation was immediately revived here that Russia might be preparing a new "peace offensive" based on Germany.

It was under Sokolovsky's administration that Russia started its get-tough policy in Germany and imposed an economic blockade on the western sectors of Berlin.

The Soviet monitor here said little more was known of Chuikov in London except that he fought with the Sixty-second Army Group at Stalingrad in 1942. Later he was in the battles of Mariupol, Zaporzhe, Nikopol and Lubin.

Last Friday, Russia relieved Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin as minister for the armed forces. Bulganin remains not only a vice premier, and thus a supervisory and policy-planning power in the government, but he also is a member of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party, the supreme authority in the Soviet Union.

Czechs Try And Imprison GIs as Spies

Prague, Czechslovakia, March 29 (U.P.).—The government announced today that two American soldiers had been tried secretly as spies and sentenced to long terms in prison at hard labor.

The United States immediately protested. An embassy official called the espionage charge "absolutely preposterous."

The official news agency said Recruit George R. Jones, 22, Owensboro, Ky., had been sentenced to 10 years and Recruit Clarence R. Hill, 31, Jackson, Miss., to 12 years.

The two soldiers came to Czechoslovakia from the United States zone of Germany. Both were absent without leave from the Sixth Armored Cavalry. They have been in prison since December 9.

No American has been allowed to visit them since they were arrested, although they were known to be in custody. Until today, the United States Embassy here did not know they had been tried.

The official announcement said the soldiers were tried Saturday by "the Senate of the State Court in Prague." The communique said Jones had been using the alias, "Alexander Hunter."

United States Ambassador Joseph E. Jacobs told a press conference that a formal note had been sent to the Foreign Office protesting "the secret trial, held so far as we know without regard for the normal rights and safeguards of an accused person."

The Ambassador said he took a "serious view" of the matter, and had "felt compelled to protest" even though he had not yet re-

U. S. Rent Bill Passes; D. C.'s Made Similar

McCarthy Riders Bring Local Law in Line With 'Better' National Measure

Both houses yesterday adopted a revised national rent control bill and the Senate promptly recut District controls to the same pattern.

The measure sent to the White House for the Nation as a whole was described by Administration leaders as better than either bill first adopted by the two houses.

The Senate's action on the House-passed District measure carried with it the threat that the local rent administration would be flooded with applications for higher rent ceilings, but how many would be granted was problematical.

Administration leaders predict that President Truman will give the national measure his speedy approval before present ceilings lapse at midnight Thursday, even though it falls short of his original request.

General Increases Doubted

The new "home-rule" measure continues Federal controls for 15 months, guaranteeing landlords a "fair net operating income . . . so far as practicable" and leaves it to States, and to cities, towns and villages—with the approval of the State Governor—to lift controls if they like.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), District Committee chairman, told reporters last night that he did not believe the revised rent - increase formula "would mean any new across-the-board increases for District residents."

"Fortunately the District rent control administrator has been granting 'fair net operating' rent adjustment the past few years," McGrath said.

Robert Cogswell, District Rent Control Administrator, would not predict just what the amendments might mean in the way of further rent boosts.

House Expected to Concur

"It may, however, bring on a wave of applications from landlords seeking increases," Cogswell added.

The measure will go to conference between the House and Senate sometime today when the House is expected to agree to the upper house amendments. The present law expires Thursday at midnight. The new bill extends local rent control until June 30, 1950.

Senator McCarthy said the six amendments to the District law adopted bring the national and District rent bills "completely in line," with one exception. McCarthy sponsored the changes.

The amended local measure requires that future decontrol of converted housing be subject to a "finding of fact" by the District Rent Control administrator that such conversion resulted in additional family units.

The national bill has no provision on converted housing.

Bricker Move Fails

After lengthy debate, the Senate sent the conference report to the House with a vote of 78 to 11. On final passage only Republicans voted no. A motion to recommit, introduced by Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio) failed, 53 to 33.

The House completed action by a vote of 263 to 143. For the bill were 196 Democrats, 66 Republicans and 1 American Labor Party

Some Democrats Back Plan

Taft Moves to Cut ECA Funds, Other U. S. Outlays By 10 Pct.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft, with some Democratic support, yesterday moved to cut the European Recovery program 10 per cent and apply the same slash to other Government outlays.

Joined by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), the chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee introduced an amendment to trim $543,000,000 from the 15-month, $5,430,000,000 ECA authorization.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), who had just warned the Senate that increased spending and taxes will lead to a depression, immediately backed up the proposal.

All denied that any rebirth of the coalition that fought hardening of the Senate's cloture rule was involved, but some of the same names figured in it.

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), himself a member of the earlier coalition, was first to denounce the Taft-Russell proposal.

Connally said the proposed slash would "impair the (ECA) program seriously."

"There's no logic in an aribitrary cut of any percentage," Connally told newsmen. "If any cuts are to be made, they should be made in specific items."

Taft sent the amendment to the desk as the Senate headed into the first of a series of night sessions.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) had just served notice the Senate will be held in

Johnson Heads Into Bomber, Carrier Fight

New Defense Chief Tackles Air Force, Navy Controversy

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson declared yesterday that he would tackle immediately the major issue of the armed forces—the division of aviation missions between the Air Force and Navy—and compel an early settlement.

He told reporters he already has a "fairly firm conviction" of what that settlement should be, but will let top Army, Navy and Air Force chiefs attempt to "argue me out of it" during the next few days before acting.

Air Force and Navy leaders have been at odds over spending large sums of money for giant B-36 bombers and super aircraft carriers. Many USAF generals consider the latter a costly infringement on their own field of strategic bombardment, while the air admirals believe the huge globe-

Redhead's Memory for Detail Provides Gambling Probe Key

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

A petite and spunky redhead, whose inside view of a corner of the underworld made her "sick of the whole business," was the source of vital information in the United States Attorney's anti-gambling crusade.

The girl is Bernice Franklin of Suitland, Md., who months ago broke with her past to become a valued Government informer and undercover agent.

She admittedly associated with a reputed gambler-bootlegger for nearly two years. Information she provided led to his arrest Saturday on a gambling charge—and for allegedly threatening her as a Government witness.

She frankly acknowledges she has witnessed many a shady deal among her acquaintances, some crooks and some policemen.

Her phenomenal memory for names, addresses, telephone numbers, license places, descriptions and happenings has provided a master key for investigators for several months.

She wrapped up her bombshell in pages of sworn testimony. U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay and his aides exploded it last weekend when they raided eight alleged gambling places simultaneously.

Several months ago, she "got sick of the whole business."

She was weary of the easy life, she said, because it had too many sordid aspects.

"Some of the things I saw every day disgusted me," she told a friend, "and I thought someone might listen to my story."

United States Attorney George Morris Fay and his special grand jury seemed to her a likely audience. Her story, in part, began:

"I, Bernice Franklin . . . during the years 1948 and 1949, have been intimately and closely acquainted with one Otillo Acalotti . . . 908 14th st. nw.," she deposed.

The name is spelled variously—Attilio, Ortillo, Otillo, or just plain Till. It's one of a series that has popped up in her experience.

Witnesses Tell Grand Jury of Rowell Beating

Victim's Evidence Is Heard 2 Hours; Gaming Suspect Testifies

Eleven men and one woman, including eyewitnesses and an alleged gambler, appeared yesterday before a grand jury investigating the mysterious beating of cab driver James Rowell at Thomas Circle before dawn on January 14.

Rowell, recovered from a broken arm, bruised ribs and broken teeth suffered in the beating, testified for two hours, and will testify again when the jury reconvenes Thursday at 10 a. m. The grand jury is seeking to determine if civil rights statutes have been violated.

Identity of Rowell's assailants has never been uncovered despite a police investigation, although Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett transferred two policemen as a result of the incident. They were Detective Sergt. James Roche and Pvt. Angelo Bonnaccorsy. Concerning the two, Barrett said early in February, "I think they're guilty as hell, but I've got to prove it."

Rowell, at a special line-up, failed to identify the two policemen as his assailants.

Others appearing before the grand jury called by the Department of Justice after an FBI investigation of the beating were:

Lee Roy Thompson, 35, former clerk in People's Drug Store at Thomas Circle. Thompson repeated to the grand jury the eyewitness account he first disclosed to two Washington Post reporters on February 15. At that time Thompson said he had seen two uniformed policemen watch two men beating

Press, Radio Services on Track News Not Affected

26 Machines Silent As Western Union Cooperates With Fay on Gambling

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

All horse race wire services within a 20-mile radius of Washington were cut off yesterday, putting the severest crimp yet into the area's bookie business.

Twenty-six teleprinters—one in Virginia, the rest in Maryland—and two wire services are involved in the sudden action. Press association tickers furnishing racing news to newspapers and radio stations were not affected.

Western Union officials would not comment beyond issuing a statement that they were "cooperating" with District Attorney George Morris Fay. But the bookies did not deny that they had lost access to up-to-the-minute information away from the tracks.

The wire service to the ticker drops was discontinued even though some of the machines were yet to be removed from the locations pinpointed by Fay after Friday's mass gambling raids.

Telephones to Come Out

More than 320 telephones at 300 District locations designated by Fay will be removed by the end of the week. The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. said yesterday that notification to customers had been mailed and that removal would start Thursday or Friday. Removal will be complete by the first of the next week at the latest.

Fay has said the multi-million dollar a year gambling industry in the area would be crippled after removal of the teleprinters which supply bookies with race results and telephones over which bets are made.

Meanwhile, Umberto D'Ambrosio, alias "Chi-Chi," surrendered himself to the United States Commissioner yesterday morning, to become the thirty-third man arrested since Fay launched eight simultaneous raids Friday.

Case Continued Until April 13

"Chi-Chi" was charged with setting up and keeping a gambling table for the purpose of betting on horse races, on a complaint of the Government undercover agent Bernice Franklin, from September 1, 1948, to January 15, 1949, at 1412 15th st. nw.

He was released under $1500 bond and his case was continued until April 13, at 10 a. m.

In another development yesterday the smoldering feud between Fay and Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett burst into flame once more.

Barrett promised a report on police antigambling activity, which, he said "will show we have done as much or more in an ordinary month than they (Fay and the grand jury) have done in ten months."

Maher Preparing Report

Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher will prepare the police report, assisted by vice squad chief Roy Blick. The report may cover the period since Barrett became chief in July, 1947, or longer.

Police antigambling action yesterday was confined to the early morning arrest of 35 persons shooting craps in the 1600 block of 4th st. nw.

Scout cars swarmed to the address after the police radio reported "shooting" instead of crap shooting. All those arrested forfeited $5 collateral on disorderly conduct charges.

Fay denied the existence of a feud between his office and the police department.

"There is no reason for friction between the U. S. Attorney's office and the police department on the gambling question," Fay said. He

Daylight Saving For D. C. Cleared

The Senate yesterday completed congressional action on a bill to let Washington have Daylight Saving Time from April 24 to September 25.

The bill permits the District Commissioners to make it effective by issuing a special order.

Truman's Economists Split; Nourse Threatens to Resign

By J. A. Livingston

KEYSERLING NOURSE CLARK
Antagonists in Council of Economic Advisers conflict

THE COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC ADVISERS, which was established by the Employment Act of 1946 to help the President develop a unified and workable economic program for the Nation, is itself now embroiled in an irreconcilable conflict. The resignation of Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the council, is in President Truman's office.

Antagonists in the conflict are Nourse, 66, who has spent most of his postgraduate years as a teacher and a research economist, and has been a past president of the American Economic Association and the American Farm Economic Association, and 41-year-old Leon H. Keyserling, a lawyer, who got into economics as an assistant at Columbia University and who later became legislative assistant to Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), then general counsel to the United States Housing Authority, and still later general counsel of the National Housing Agency.

Though chairman of the council, Nourse is a minority of one. John D. Clark, third member, who is 64, sides with Keyserling in what began as a difference over procedure but has widened into a rift over philosophy, purpose and economic outlook of the council.

Nourse views the council as a nonpolitical, professional body. Keyserling and Clark, who like

Senate Approves Tamm as Judge

The Senate last night in executive session approved the nomination of Edward A. Tamm, 42, as associate judge of the District Court here.

Tamm, former assistant to the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has been serving under recess appointment after the Senate failed to confirm him during the last session. His nomination then was opposed by both the District and American Bar Associations. President Truman first named Tamm to the District bench on February 3, 1948.

Prices Cut on Costly Items As Buyer Resistance Mounts

New York, March 29 (AP).—A new series of retail price cuts was laid before the consumer today, further clipping inflation's wings. Most of the reductions were from highly inflated levels and many of them were small.

Automobiles and auto accessories, radios, refrigerators, ranges were among the wide variety of items affected.

The main item common to all the price reduction was an increased resistance on the part of the buyer. There has been a tendency to wait and see whether prices will come down a bit.

One result was that the Federal Reserve Board, which took some of the controls off installment buying early this month, lowered the margin requirements on stock purchases from 75 per cent to 50 per cent. It brought quick response in Wall Street. Buying orders poured into the New York Stock Exchange today. Prices moved ahead.

Continued reductions in such basic commodities as lead, zinc, copper and steel indicated there might be further cuts in manufactured goods.

Radios showed the biggest drop. Westinghouse Electric chopped a lusty 20 to 50 per cent off nine home model sets. That's as much as $130 on a cash basis.

Kaiser-Frazer Corp. knocked $198 to $333 off its car prices. Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co. saw a "possible" reduction in Fords.

Willard Storage Battery Co. clipped $1.50 off its $23.95 automobile battery and up to $2 off large automotive types. Electric Storage Battery Co. shaved its prices 8 per cent.

Willard said it was the first major battery producer to announce a reduction in seven years.

National Bank Seeks Banker and $700,000

New York, March 29 (U.P.).—The National City Bank reported missing today one banker and almost $700,000 in cash and negotiable bonds.

Police said a 13-State alarm was out for Richard H. Crowe, 41-year-old assistant manager of a National City branch bank in Manhattan, who had just returned to work after suffering a nervous breakdown.

Mrs. Crowe said her husband left home Sunday with one small suitcase and said he was going to Buffalo.

Bar to Amendment Of Labor Bill Asked

Union Charged

T-H Boycott Ban Violated, NLRB Rules

A union violated the secondary-boycott ban of the Taft-Hartley Act when its pickets "followed the products" of a struck employer to the premises of other employers, the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday.

In another case, an NLRB trial examiner found that a plumbers' union violated the secondary-boycott prohibition by picketing the construction sites of a church and Salvation Army citadel.

Signed By All Members

The decision of the NLRB, signed by all five members of the board, determined that Printing Specialties & Paper Converters Union, Local 388, AFL, had broken the Taft-Hartley law in "following" the goods of Sealright Pacific Ltd., of Los Angeles.

Union pickets followed trucks bearing Sealright merchandise to the loading platform of a Los Angeles truck company, and also picketed the docks where paper for Sealright products were being unloaded from a ship.

Decision of the board reversed an earlier ruling by a trial examiner that peaceful picketing, even in a secondary boycott, was protected by the so-called "free speech" provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Illegal Boycott

The second case involved a local of the AFL Plumbers' Union at Anniston, Ala. Examiner Maurice M. Miller found that the union fostered an illegal boycott aimed at the plumbing subcontractor on two projects—the church and the citadel—because the firm did not employ union plumbers.

Charges against Local 498 of the Plumbers Union were filed by the Pettus-Banister Co., general contractors. Object of the boycott was Collins Heating & Plumbing Co. Most of the employes on the two projects were AFL building trades employes. They walked off the jobs after the plumbers union had posted one picket at each project.

The House Rules Committee yesterday was asked to send the Fair Deal labor bill to the floor of the House under a procedure that would bar a amendment to the bitterly controversial measure.

Request for the closed rule, made by Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman of the House Labor Committee, appeared from the start to be a hopeless gesture. There are 12 members of the Rules Committee, and eight fall within the Republican-Southern Democrat anti-Fair Deal coalition.

"Optimistic, aren't you," snorted Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.), after Lesinski had stated he was asking for a no-amendment clearance of the Administration's bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and replace it with an "improved" Wagner Act.

Another Meeting Today

After an hour and a half of tumultous and acrimonious questioning, debate, combat and retort, the meeting broke up to answer a quorum calll on the floor of the House.

Another open meeting of the committee will be held this morning at 10:30 in the Capitol.

The line of questioning by Representative Cox and Representative Howard D. Smith (D., Va.) indicated that the Southern Democrats in the House may try to substitute the Wood bill for the Fair Deal management-labor relations measure.

The Wood bill, introduced by Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.) would retain the Taft-Hartley Act with minor modifications.

Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.), also appearing before the Rules Committee, charged that the Wood bill, in effect, removed one of the few features of the Taft-Hartley Act which benefited labor rather than management."

Jacobs Rushes to Aid

Jacobs, a former labor lawyer, rushed to the aid of Labor Committee Chairman Lesinski when the latter floundered on legal aspects of the labor legislation under insistent and hostile quizzing by Cox.

Soon Jacobs found himself taking on not only Cox and Smith, but also Representative Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.), the senior minority member of the Rules Committee. In face of this rather awesome array of long-time experience and skill in the art of congressional needling, Freshman Jacobs held his ground and had his say.

Meanwhile, two Fair Deal members of the Rules Committee, Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), and Ray J. Madden (D., Ind.), tried to help out the Lesinski-Jacobs arguments by beating back repeated interruptions by Cox, Smith and Allen.

Repartee

The repartee yesterday included:

Lesinski: I'll let my legal counsel answer that question. Smith: Legal counsel won't be around to answer the questions when they come up on the floor.

Cox: Who ordered the Lesinski bill to be written that way? Sabath: The voters on election day.

Maddden: The Hartley bill (in 1947) was submitted to the Labor Committee and railroaded through within a matter of a few hours. Sabath: The Republicans had such experienced lawyers, they figured the bill didn't require much going over.

Cox: What happens if the House strikes out the first two clauses of the Lesinski bill repealing the Taft-Hartley Act and restoring the Wagner Act? Sabath: No need to ask about something that just can't possibly happen.

Allen: If I were in labor, I'd want to join a union. But I'd want to know what happens to my dues. I'd want to question these "labor racketeers." Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio): We've got a rollcall.

The nine Republican members of the House Labor Committee—which last week reported out the Lesinski bill without amendments on a 13-10 vote—issued a minority report yesterday.

They charged that the Lesinski bill "would have the effect of encouraging, fostering, and nurturing uncontrolled labor monopolies in the United States, and of conferring upon labor union officials unbridled and unconfined monopolistic power over the lives and destinies of every American and even over the operation of government itself."

Instead of the Lesinski bill, the committee minority urged six amendments "for correction and clarification" of the Taft-Hartley Act. The major amendments would extend the anti-Communist affidavits, now required of unions, to management as well; and permit certain secondary boycotts, whereas all secondary boycotts are outlawed under the present law.

Taxi Drivers Vote to Strike In New York

New York, March 29 (AP).—A city-wide taxicab strike has been set tentatively for 4:30 a. m. Friday in a dispute over union recognition.

A union meeting of approximately 3300 night-shift taxi drivers and inside workers voted early today for the strike.

Day-shift drivers and other workers will vote on strike action late today and a union spokesman said a strike would be certain if the afternoon vote followed the morning trend. The union said a strike would tie up all the city's 11,414 taxicabs.

The union is Local 35 of the Taxicab Workers Organizing Committee, a unit of the United Construction Workers and an affiliate of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

Chief point in the dispute is the employers' refusal to recognize the union until it has been certified by an election under State labor laws.

The union demands immediate recognition.

Appeal to the National Labor Relations Board is barred because officers of Lewis' parent union have not signed Taft-Hartley Act non-Communist affidavits.

Meanwhile, Federal mediators are seeking to settle a strike by 1500 waterfront warehouse workers, which has tied up an estimated 100 million dollars worth of raw materials stored in 300 buildings.

The men struck yesterday at warehouses handling a major portion of imports passing through the port of New York.

The strikers are members of three warehousemen's locals of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association. They refused to work because negotiations in a wage reopening clause of their contract have stalled.

Jensen Warns of Big Power Profit Grab

By The Associated Press

Representative Jensen (R., Iowa) told the House yesterday of public power facilities in the Pacific Northwest. He called for a congressional investigation.

His intimation in a speech on the Interior Department appropriation bill was that these "operators" hoped to sell private facilities to the Government at inflated prices.

Jensen suggested that among those who ought to be questioned at a public hearing are former Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington, Paul J. Raver, head of the Bonneville Power Administration, and Guy C. Myers, whom he identified as a "Wall Street financial operator."

Put in Record

Jensen urged the hearing at the conclusion of a speech he prepared for delivery. He did not deliver the entire speech, but put it in the Congressional Record.

The Interior Appropriation bill finances the Bonneville project. Jensen has long been a foe of public power projects.

Jensen said he has correspondence revealing that the Bonneville Power Administration "is deeply involved in political shenanigans and is contributing to the enrichment of a group of Wall Street promoters and Wall Street holding companies at the expense of the Federal taxpayers and of the power consumers of the State of Washington."

"It is shocking and scandalous," he added.

The House adjourned for the day without acting on the bill. Before taking it up, it passed a $593,292,270 money bill for waterways projects and other Army civil functions during the year beginning July 1.

Bill Goes to Senate

The measure, approved by voice vote, now goes to the Senate.

The approved total is $6,530,270 more than that recommended by the House Appropriations Committee. Chief increase was one of six million dollars for flood control work in the lower Mississippi River.

The amount voted represents a slash of upward of 20 per cent from President Truman's budget requests. Most of the cut was made in anticipation of a 15 per cent drop in construction costs on flood control and navigation projects. But with a few specified exceptions, the Army engineers would be expected to perform all work programmed for the coming year in the budget estimates.

Export Bank Earns Over $23 Million

The Government's Export-Import Bank, which makes loans abroad, reported yesterday "net earnings" of $23,700,000 in the last half of 1948.

Looking back over its 15 years of operations, the Bank summed up its record in a report to Congress.

Since 1934, it has loaned $4,272,000,000 to 40 or more countries in Europe, North and South America, Asia and Africa. The present total of credit outstanding is $2,533,000,000. The Bank has 967 million dollars available for making new loans.

AFL Groups to Seek Anti-Red Organization

The International Relations Committee of the American Federation of Labor will meet April 7 to determine what steps to take in setting up a world-wide anti-Communist labor organization.

Problem facing the committee is a practical way of teaming up with the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations in the new global federation. The British unions stand ready to join such an anti-Red labor bloc, but only if the AFL and CIO come in together.

Revenue Chief Reports Tax Checkup Lax

The Nation's top tax collector told Senators yesterday that he has to rely on the people's honesty and arithmetic 95 per cent of the time.

He doesn't think it works very well.

"One's imagination is staggered," said George J. Schoeneman Internal Revenue Commissioner, at the thought of how much more revenue might be collected if all income tax returns were checked.

He went before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee to ask that the revenue bureau be allowed 5543 more employes than the House provided in a Treasury-Post-office money bill for the year starting July 1.

Schoeneman said the bureau is so short-handed that only one out of four of the individual short-form income tax returns can even be checked for correct addition and subtraction.

In the 1948 fiscal year, Schoeneman said, the bureau received 88,465,725 tax returns. Less than 3,000,000 were audited, he said, and 79,736,205 were simply accepted as filed.

Korean Bishop Held On Wartime Charge

Seoul, March 29 (AP).—Yang Ju Sam, 70, first Methodist Bishop of Korea, was arrested today on charges of wartime collaborating with the Japanese.

He is among 80 persons arrested since January on collaboration charges. Pending trial at least 52 days hence, details of the accusation were withheld.

U. S. Citizens' Group Formed To Seek Hoover Report Action

Philadelphia, March 29 (AP).—Hundreds of prominent United States citizens banded together today to fight for sweeping changes in the organization and operation of the Federal Government.

Formation of the committee was announced by the chairman, Dr. Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University. He said the Nation-wide group will seek "far-reaching, enduring reforms."

The committee, said Dr. Johnson, is "essentially educational and not a super-lobby.

"Our whole purpose is to let the people talk. And the Congress will understand the will of the people."

Dr. Johnson told a news conference he accepted the chairmanship of the committee at the personal request of former President Herbert Hoover, whose commission already has submitted to Congress recommendations for changes in the Federal Government.

Their dual object:

To slash Federal spending "seven to ten million dollars a day."

To create an efficient Government organization geared to the needs of a great and complex nation.

"We do not want," said Dr. Johnson, "the recommendations of the Hoover Commission to gather dust on the desks of Congress. The people want these changes and this committee has been formed to present the picture to all the people."

Dr. Johnson emphasized that the committee of citizens is nonpartisan. It includes a cross-section of about 600 top level industrial, labor, political, educational and journalistic leaders; it may be expanded to 5000.

Rationing in Britain Relaxed to Feed Bees

London, March 29 (U.P.).—The government's rigid rationing system was relaxed today for starving bees.

The Food Ministry granted beekeepers an extra April allowance of 5 pounds of sugar per colony to save millions of bees that faced starvation because of last year's unfavorable weather. It will be deducted from the normal allocation in the fall.

De Gaulle Demands Arms Aid Priority

Paris, March 29 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today demanded priority for France in American arms shipments to back the Atlantic Pact.

The North Atlantic Alliance is a good thing, but is not enough, he told a news conference.

There must be shipments of American arms immediately, he said, and the first shipments must be to France, because she is the main protection of western Europe.

He declared again that it would be a "grave mistake" to base European defense on Britain, and said France must have arms because:

1. Another occupation of France, followed by a bombardment to liberate her, would wreck the country morally and physically.

2. Most of the troops defending the Rhine or Elbe—at least at first—would be French.

De Gaulle called for a precise schedule of arms shipments and for definite strategic commitments from the United States in case of attack.

He called the news conference to comment on local elections the last two Sundays, in which his rightist Rally of the French People came out as the strongest single party but still inferior to the three-party bloc making up the government.

He said it was "quite natural" if the United States did not want to send arms to France now because the present French government was "incapable of inspiring or directing a defense worthy of the name."

Meanwhile, Norway's Parliament approved the Atlantic Treaty text and authorized the government to sign it in Washington Monday. The vote was 130 to 13, with 2 Labor representatives and the Communists in opposition.

Dispatches from the liner Queen Mary said British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin is expected to raise the question of a Mediterranean pact to parallel the Atlantic Alliance.

Spain and Portugal completed 10 days of talks under their Iberian pact, clearing the way for Portugal to join in the Atlantic Alliance, Madrid dispatches reported.

The Icelandic Parliament began debate on joining the alliance by defeating a Communist motion of nonconfidence in the government, 37 to 9.

CLOSE CALL BY BULLET—Four-year-old Paul J. Hastings, jr., of Salisbury, Md., who accidentally fired a bullet through his head Saturday, was not only alive yesterday, but was home from the hospital and almost well again. Paul was riding in an auto with his mother, father and two brothers. Rummaging around in the back seat he came across his father's .22 target pistol. It went off and the bullet went through the boy's throat and out an ear canal, grazing the skull. It passed through his mother's hair, hit the windshield and bounced into the front seat

Sokolovsky Is Transferred

Sokolovsky will be first deputy premier to Marshal Alexander M. Vassilevsky, who had served as first deputy to Bulganin.

Sokolovsky was one of Russia's war heroes, who distinguished himself in the defense of Smolensk and Moscow, and in the capture of Smolensk, Orel and other cities before he was made commander in chief on the western front in 1943. His troops captured southern Poland, entered German Silesia and crossed the Oder River.

Sokolovsky was named first deputy to Marshal Georgi Zhukov, then commander in chief in Germany, after the war. He succeeded Zhukov in April, 1946.

AMG Officials Believe Soviet May Lift Blockade

Berlin, March 29 (NYHT).—For the first time since last summer, responsible American military government officials consider there is a serious possibility that the Russians may lift their Berlin blockade in the near future—guesses range from midsummer to fall.

Economic and political officials here believe it has become clear to the Russians that the blockade has reached the point of steeply diminishing returns.

The airlift has taken the sting out of the Soviet attempts to starve out this city and thus force out the Western Allies.

And from an international point of view the blockade damages the Russian cause by stimulating the western democracies to rearmament and military alertness.

Finally, these officials point out that, should the Russians lift the blockade, the Western Allies are still pledged to reopen the question of Germany's future at a Foreign Ministers' conference. The blockade at the moment is one of the most compelling reasons for accepting Germany's split and going ahead with the western state as quickly as possible.

Will Rogers' Maxim Tossed at Will, Jr.

Los Angeles, March 29 (U.P.).—The words of his famous father were quoted to Will Rogers, jr., today by a Traffic Court judge who fined the former Congressman $40.

Municipal Judge Roger Alton Pfaff fined Rogers for speeding and unsafe passing of another car at an intersection, and then said:

"I guess you know, son, what your daddy used to say about things like this: 'Don't speed—get up 15 minutes earlier'."

Sforza Meets With Acheson On Colonies

Count Carlo Sforza, Italy's foreign minister, who next week will sign the North Atlantic Security Treaty, talked to Secretary of State Acheson for an hour yesterday.

He said afterward that they had discussed the future of Italy's colonies in Africa and had reviewed the general European situation.

"We had an exchange of views on how to create links and facts like the Franco-Italian economic union, which contributed to the solidarity of Europe," Count Sforza told reporters.

He said the question of Italy's colonies was a part of the general discussion, but he added:

"I don't believe in colonies. I believe in the interests of Africa."

Italy has been contending that it would be in North Africa's best interests for her to be given a trusteeship over Eritrea, Tripolitania and Somaliland, colonies which were wrested from Italian and German forces in World War II.

The United Nations Assembly is to decide the future of the colonies at a session in New York beginning April 5, the day after the signing of the Atlantic Treaty here.

Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk told reporters on Monday that the United States favors the return of Somaliland to Italy under a U. N. trusteeship.

The American position on what is to be done about Eritrea and Tripolitania has not been disclosed.

Count Sforza planned to return to New York after his conference with Secretary Acheson, a circumstance that strengthened the belief that he came here primarily to talk about the African colonies.

He expects to be on the pier in New York when the Queen Mary arrives today with the foreign ministers of Britain, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. He will come down to Washington with the others on a special railroad car Thursday.

GermanLeader Is Defiant on Constitution

Frankfurt, March 29 (U.P.)—The head of Germany's powerful Social Democratic Party defied the Big Three powers today.

Dr. Kurt Schumacher, fiery, one-armed, one-legged political leader, said the Big Three plan for a decentralized federalist west German government "never will become a part of the west German constitution."

Schumacher said Socialist delegates to the Bonn constitutional assembly will ignore official Allied criticism in writing a constitution for western Germany.

After the document is written, he added in an interview, the Allies can take it or leave it.

Schumacher, an anti-Communist, said the Western powers "should have considered before they empowered the Bonn assembly to write a constitution that German politicians would not submit to being mere pawns."

Members of the assembly recently rejected Allied suggestions for revisions in the constitution. They broke off negotiations with the Allies and said they would go ahead and write the constitution as they saw fit.

"The Allies should not expect German politicians to indorse things they are convinced are wrong," Schumacher said. "Democracy would thus lose its political and moral value, and the way would be cleared for antidemocratic, nationalist movements which may turn pro-Russian.

"To raise the concept of federalism to a fetish is an outmoded and expensive luxury, and a dangerous course for . . . Europe."

Trans-Jordan, Israel Agree To Pact Terms

Rhodes, March 29 (AP).—Israeli and Trans-Jordan delegates accepted armistice terms today and returned to their capitals for final approval of the draft.

United Nations officials immediately left for Damascus to start work on armistice negotiations with another Arab state, Syria.

The Trans-Jordan agreement may be signed Friday, extending the Palestine armistice that began when Egypt signed an accord February 24. Lebanon signed an armistice agreement with Israel March 23.

The official announcement of today's agreement said one "outstanding question" still was unsettled. It was believed this involved details of a face-saving agreement for reduction of forces in the Aqaba area.

Israel has contended that Britain upset the "balance" of forces during the cease-fire by sending troops and reinforcements to the Trans-Jordan port of Aqaba, on an arm of the Red Sea. Israel moved troops to a bit of the Palestine coast adjacent to Aqaba and asked for a reduction of British forces.

In a report to the U. N. Security Council, Mediator Ralph Bunche said Israel, Trans-Jordan and Britain all violated the truce agreement by sending reinforcements into the area.

(Christopher P. Mayhew, British Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, told Commons in a written statement today Britain is challenging Bunche's report that Britain violated the truce.)

Clay Confirms Two Malmedy Death Verdicts

Frankfurt, Germany, March 29 (AP)—Gen. Lucius D. Clay today confirmed the death sentences of two more Malmedy massacre defendants.

They are Josef Diefenthal, major-commander in Germany's Second Panzer Grenadier Regiment, and Friedel Bode, a sergeant in the First Panzer Pioneer Battalion.

The general ruled that there was enough evidence to convict Diefenthal and Bode without the confessions they repudiated.

Clay's report said Diefenthal was convicted of issuing orders that no prisoners would be taken by his battalion.

Baldwin Named Head Of Malmedy Inquiry

By the United Press

Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) was named yesterday to head a congressional investigation of charges that the Army mistreated German prisoners accused of the Malmedy massacre.

Baldwin said his Senate Armed Services Subcommittee hopes to open its inquiry in about two weeks. He said several young attorneys who helped prosecute the Germans will be called as witnesses.

The 12 Germans were sentenced to death after an Army war crimes court convicted them of participating in the slaying of some 100 unarmed Americans who surrendered near Malmedy, Belgium, in the Battle of the Bulge late in 1944.

A special civilian commission set up to review the convictions later urged that the sentences be reduced to life imprisonment.

Among other things, Army prosecutors were accused of staging mock trials in which the German prisoners were "found guilty." The prisoners then were told, it was charged, that things would go easier with them if they confessed.

Dutch Accept Bid to Parley On Indonesia

The Hague, March 29 (AP).—The Dutch government accepted an invitation from the United Nations Commission for Indonesia today to discuss a settlement of Indonesian problems directly with Republican leaders in Batavia.

L. N. Palar, Indonesian delegate to the U. N., had announced the Indonesian Republic would be willing to enter into direct negotiations with the Dutch if the Republican government were restored to power in its capital at Jogjakarta by April 4.

The Dutch government announcement said nothing about this, but stipulated that the "suggested discussions will be held without prejudicing the rights, claims and positions of parties and consequently will not prejudice the responsibility of the Netherlands for freedom and order in Indonesia."

Non-Republican leaders in Dutch-controlled Sumatra urged today that their island be given a larger voice in moves for establishing a sovereign United States of Indonesia. A dispatch from Medan said 79 delegates from 12 Sumatran states confered there.

Yugoslavia Denies Stories Of Disorders

Belgrade, March 29 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav government today denounced recent reports of unrest in Yugoslavia as deliberate lies.

A communique issued by the official news agency Tanjug implied that the "senseless fabrications" were being spread by Premier Marshal Tito's enemies in the International Communist Information Bureau.

The stories specifically rejected by the communique included reports of:

"Increasing tension in Yugoslavia, sabotage disorders, and an uprising of 'anti-Tito partisans.'

"Battles on the Yugoslav borders, and attempts to assassinate Marshal Tito.

"Mobilization of doctors in Slovenia, troop maneuvers in Istria, fortifications of Yugoslavia's borders near the free territory of Trieste, and actions taken against armed bands.

"Mass dismissal of 'anti-Tito' elements. A meeting of Marshal Tito or Minister (of Interior Alexander) Rankovic with representatives of Western powers on the island of Prionl, and so forth."

China's Chief Peace Delegate Flies to Consult With Chiang

Nanking, March 29 (U.P.).—Chang Chih-chung, head of the Nationalist government peace delegation, flew to Chikow today to consult with retired President Chiang Kai-shek on strategy for negotiations with the Communists, scheduled to begin in Peiping Friday.

Although Chang's mission was surrounded with official secrecy, it was understood he would seek to obtain Chiang Kai-shek's approval of the government's peace proposals which have been mapped out in cabinet sessions this week.

The government today added another member to its delegation, bringing to six the number who will confer with the Communists.

The new delegate is Liu Fei, formerly Vice Minister of National Defense, who joins the delegation as a military expert.

French Attacked In Indo-China

Hanoi, Indo-China, March 29 (AP).—A band of Chinese Communists seized part of the Indo-Chinese border town of Mocay Sunday and attacked the garrison in the citadel there, the French announced today.

The attack, in which 30 persons were killed, emphasized fears of the French that Indo-China would be placed under heavy pressure if all China went Communist.

Reds Plotted Civil War, Court Told

New York, March 29 (AP).—A Government witness at the Communist conspiracy trial testified today the U. S. Communist Party was told to go underground and engage in civil war if this country joined Great Britain in the recent war.

The instructions were issued at a secret Chicago meeting of party leaders after Russia and Germany signed their 1939 pact, the witness said.

Louis F. Budenz, the witness, said the directions came from Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the party and a defendant in the trial.

The meeting was held in the basement of a building, Budenz said. He did not identify the building or give the exact date.

Dennis said going underground would involve splitting the party into basic units which would not have contact with one another and destruction of all "incriminating" party records, the witness said.

The Government introduced evidence to show that the United States Communist Party centered its postwar recruiting efforts among labor union members and veterans.

United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey read to the jury a report by John B. Williamson, a defendant, which said the party should seek to influence all "mass organizations."

The report said industrial workers should comprise more than half of the party's membership in California, eastern Pennsylvania and New York, and 75 per cent in Michigan, Illinois and Ohio.

Williamson, party labor secretary, also recommended a further concentration among industrial workers in cities like McKeesport, Pa., Schenectady, N. Y., Flint, Mich., Gary, Ind., and Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal towns, McGohey said.

The report was made to the national convention of the Communist Party in July, 1945, the prosecutor said.

Budenz covered the convention for the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, of which he once was managing editor. In October, 1945, he left the party. He now teaches economics at Fordham University.

Budenz destified that the preamble of the party constitution adopted at the July, 1945, convention meant that the organization was "basically committed to the overthrow of the government of the United States as set up under its constitution."

This could be brought about only by "force and violence," he said.

Reds Reject Money Gift From Anna Strong

New York, March 28 (NYHT).—Communist party rejected today a gift of $1000 from Anna Louise Strong which had been earmarked for the defense of 11 party leaders on trial in United States District Court. Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the party and one of the defendants, said that "we do not wish our defense to be used as a shabby promotion scheme and a protective screen for political-journalistic efforts designed to worsen American-Soviet relations."

The check was for part of the money Miss Strong received for her articles on her recent arrest in Russia as a spy.

Newark, N. J., March 29 (AP).—A coast to coast tour of 18 Communist "World Peace" Conference delegates ended before it started tonight.

The State Department spiked the proposed cross-country journey of delegates from behind the iron curtain less than 12 hours before they were to appear at the first of a series of "No More War" rallies here.

The department said their United States visas were good only for last weekend's Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace in New York City.

Later a spokesman for the conference said in New York that the Communist delegates "definitely will not appear" at any of the scheduled meetings. "Uuless Dean Acheson (Secretary of State) reverses his ruling that their visas are to be considered as expiring."

The conference representative said a telegram had been sent to Acheson requesting him to rescind the order and accusing the State Department "of notifying the world it has slammed shut the door to the exchange of cultural relations between the United States and other countries."

George Pepper, director of the Hollywood rally set for April 9 and 10, said motion pictures will be taken on the delegates delivering their addresses before they leave New York, and that the films will be shown at points in the program at which they normally would speak.

In Washington, the State Department notified the Russian Embassy and those of its satellite nations that the delegates were admitted to this country only to attend the New York conference.

The department said that now the conference is over, it assumed the delegates will leave within "a reasonable time."

Later, Attorney General Tom Clark said in answer to a question:

"The express purpose for which these visas were issued has now been ended."

He said he has instructed the Immigration Service in New York to get in touch with the delegates individually and tell them that they must leave as soon as travel arrangements can be made.

Informed of the Government action, Dr. Harold E. Lippman, secretary of the New Jersey Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, said the rally here tonight would go on as scheduled.

Lippman said about 3000 tickets, ranging in price from 60 cents to $4.80, had been sold for the rally.

The Mosque theater seats 3365 and can accommodate about 4500 persons including standees.

A preliminary itinerary called for meetings in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Detroit, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

The "Cultural Rally for Peace" here went on minus it heralded star attraction—Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovitch.

The audience of some 3000 persons was told of the Government action. Then the house lights were dimmed. A single spotlight shone on an empty piano.

Delegates from outside the Soviet sphere—Cuba, England and French West Africa—spoke. Outside the Mosque theater, where the rally was held, about 40 pickets paraded, representing veterans' groups who have protested the conference as Communist dominated.

Jacobs said the Foreign Office promised today that a representative of the embassy would be allowed to visit the prisoners next week. The Foreign Office also said a detailed note on the case was being prepared in answer to his protest.

(American Army authorities in Frankfurt dismissed the espionage charge as a "propaganda hoax." They speculated it was in retaliation for the conviction of 17 Czechoslovak spies in Germany in a series of United States military trials which ended Thursday.)

Details of the arrest were uncertain—one story said the soldiers were seized as they walked along a railroad track at night, while another said they were arrested in a dance hall where they had stopped with some German girls.

The men were carrying no identification papers, a fact which United States officials here considered as proof that the "spy charges" were false. They pointed out that any spy sent into a foreign country would certainly be equipped with a full set of papers.

In a censored letter, dated January 15, Hill wrote from prison:

"Myself and friend . . . are being held for crossing the Czechoslovak boundary without authority or papers. We have been questioned, but nothing has been done about returning us to the United States zone of Germany. We have been held since December 9. I hope you can do something about it."

A Government official announced today that the scheduled trial in absentia of 17 Czech refugees accused of treason had been postponed indefinitely.

Woman in U. S. Since '14 Faces Ouster as Red

New York, March 29 (U.P.).—Betty Gannett, 42, who entered this country from her native Poland at the age of 7, faced deportation as a revolutionary alien today for work in the United States Communist Party, which she currently serves as assistant organizational director.

She was arrested on a street corner by FBI agents last night shortly after she left the Communist headquarters. She was taken to Ellis Island and held until this afternoon, when she was released on $1000 bond put up by the American Committee for Protection of the Foreign Born.

Miss Gannett was assistant to Henry Winston, one of the party's national board now being tried by the Federal Government.

The Government said that Miss Gannett, who left this country only once—in 1928—to revisit Europe, had devoted almost her entire life to Communist activity.

The Immigration Department said her real name was Rifke Yawschewsky, that she was born in Radziwillow, Poland, and entered this country in August, 1914. They said she has used half a dozen aliases.

Engineer Lied, U. S. Charges

New Orleans, March 29 (AP).—The country's first indictment charging false statements at a Government loyalty hearing was returned here today.

Named in the six-count indictment was Robert Edgar Himmaugh, 43, of St. Rose, La., a former engineer of the Federal Barge Lines, under the Department of Commerce.

Each count charged a false statement regarding Communist Party membership or Communist activity. Three of the statements were made before a loyalty board and three in letters to Commerce Department officials.

U. S. District Attorney J. Skelly Wright said Himmaugh was discharged "as a direct result" of the loyalty hearing last fall.

A hint that more indictments of this type might be forthcoming was given by James E. Palmer, jr., of Washington, special assistant to the Attorney General, who aided the grand jury investigation.

In a formal statement announcing the indictment, Palmer said:

"The present case being the first case of prosecution for falsehoods at a loyalty hearing itself, it should be a stern reminder to all who appear before loyalty boards to tell the truth or face the consequences.

"Whenever and wherever any other such cases arise the Department of Justice intends to prosecute them."

Himmaugh surrendered to the United States marshal about two hours after the indictment was returned.

Conviction carries maximum penalty of five years and $5000 fine.

6 Jailed for Refusal To Give Jury Answers

Los Angeles, March 29 (U.P.).—Five men and one woman today were sent to jail indefinitely until they answer a Federal grand jury's questions about communism.

Federal Judge Pierson Hall said any time they decided to talk the jury would be convened within 24 hours.

They are Irving Caress, Merle Brodsky, Robert Blair, Phillip Bock, Frank Spector and Mrs. Lilian Doran.

New York Senate Votes School Job Purge Bill

Albany, March 29 (U.P.). — The New York Senate today approved a bill designed to keep members of subversive organizations off the teaching staffs of the State's public school system. The vote was 41 to 14.

The bil mandates the board of regents, governing body of the public school system, to draw up rules and regulations to prevent members of subversive groups from holding jobs as teachers, school officials or employes.

Opposition to the measure was led by Democratic minority Senators who termed it "un-American" and "a violation of the right of free thought."

Record West-East Air Mark Claimed

New York, March 29 (AP).—Former Army Major Joe de Bona claimed a new transcontinental air record today of 4 hours and 57 minutes.

He flew from Burbank, Calif., to New York City in actor Jimmy Stewart's F-51 fighter plane.

The cross-country dash began, De Bona said, at 9:23 a. m. (EST). The stripped-down fighter zoomed over the control tower at LaGuardia Field at 2:20 p. m.

The present record for the distance is 6 hours, 7 minutes and 5 seconds. It was set by Paul Mantz, Hollywood stunt pilot, in February, 1947.

De Bona said he averaged 530 miles an hour, pushed along by a 55-mile-an-hour tail wind.

Mantz Cuts Record For West Coast Flight

Burbank, Calif., March 29 (UP). Speed Pilot Paul Mantz, flying an R-51 fighters, slashed 13 minutes off the San Francisco to Los Angeles record for propeller-driven planes today, landing her 49 minutes and 32 seconds after his takeoff.

Mantz complained he would have cut another 11 minutes off the old mark if the governor on his propeller had not gone out.

"I flew the first half of the 336 miles in about 17½ minutes, when the governor conked out," he said. "After that it was like driving in second gear."

Johnson Seeks Service Peace

ranging bombers are predoomed to failure.

Johnston's predecessor as Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, favored developing both, even though it might later prove to be a duplication. The new Defense Secretary did not indicate his views in the controversy, but he is believed to lean to the Air Force position.

To "Press Unification"

Holding his first press conference as Defense Secretary, Johnson promised to "press unification to the limit of the present law as rapidly as efficiency of the services will permit." He also backed legislation now before Congress which would give him much stronger authority over the military establishment.

As the big, bald-pated West Virginian was talking to reporters, the first major opposition to that legislation was voiced on Capitol Hill. Ferdinand Eberstadt, New York banker and former Munitions Board chairman, challenged the Administration proposal as "dangerously unsound."

Eberstadt, who headed the Hoover Commission task force on unification, told the Senate Armed Services Committee that concentration of power in the Secretary of Defense could produce a "separate empire."

As the result of Eberstadt's testimony, Committee Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md.) indicated the bill will get a thorough study by the group. He said that additional witnesses will be called, and that Eberstadt's proposed amendments will be submitted to Forrestal and Johnson for comment.

The witness objected particularly to the proposed powers for the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, contending it would make him quite like a military commander of the armed forces.

On the other side of the Capitol, Johnson and Forrestal were invited before the House Armed Services Committee for a farewell ceremony for the latter. Forrestal, who put off a scheduled vacation in Florida to attend, was praised by the Congressmen, and presented with a silver bowl.

Predecessor Praised

Johnson also praised Forrestal in announcing a series of unification orders and plans. Most of them, he told reporters, were the work of "that great American, Jim Forrestal."

Wielding "a new broom," Johnson:

1. Declared there are "too damn many" boards and committees—some 800 in all—and said large numbers of them will be abolished or merged.

2. Said long-range plans for wholesale office moves within the Pentagon will be carried out immediately. Johnson will swap offices with Army Secretary Kenneth Royall, and the Army, Navy and Air Force—now scattered throughout the huge building—will be concentrated in separate areas to promote efficiency.

3. Predicted there will be some heads roll, but promised this would not come "fast and thick." He said he'd told the three Secretaries that he had no intention of replacing "the fellows that are doing a job" but that those who would not work for unification will go.

Secrets to Be Guarded

4. Promised there would be no further disclosure of military secrets by the services competing for headlines. Aside from secrets, Johnson declared he'd "play fair with the press" if the press played fair with him.

5. Challenged a reporter's statement that universal military training was a "dead duck," but put off all questions on the military budget, other legislation, and occupation policies "until later."

While newsreel cameras churned, Johnson—a Democratic Party stalwart—promised there would be no politics, "party or personal," in defense matters as long as he was secretary. He declared he had "no personal ambitions," and added that he regarded his job as "a sacred trust."

Discussing unification, Johnson said he considered "the time ripe for action," but stated there would be no "precipitate moves." He disclosed that Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Air Force material chief, will advise him on organizational and administrative matters for the next two to three months.

Office Reallocation

McNarney's first job, he said, was working out the allocation of office space within the Pentagon. Under the approved plan, some Army units will move elsewhere, additional Navy divisions will be transferred across the river, and the Office of Defense will expand. When the shifts are completed, the Army will occupy 49 per cent of the office space, the Air Force, 25 per cent and the Navy and Office of Defense, 13 per cent each.

Johnson said carrying out the shifts now will bring economies, though other officials estimated the remodeling charges will run close to $500,000.

The defense chief parried all questions on his views about the moot question of Air Force and naval aviation roles and fissions. But he revealed that the Joint Chiefs of Staff will leave shortly for Key West, Fla., for a meeting with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Ike, who is chairman of the Joint Chiefs, is recuperating from a serious stomach ailment.

Grandson Is Her Hero . . .

AFTER THE FIRE—Mrs. Ida Chalmers, of 805 5th st. nw., examines her grandson's cut wrist. The youth, Vern Prentice, 17, broke a window in her smoke-filled room and led her to safety when fire started yesterday in the basement of the building

Nine persons fled to safety early yesterday as fire broke out in the basement of a building at 805 5th st. nw., housing employes of the Gospel Mission, 810 5th st. nw.

Vern Prentice, 16-year-old son of Harvey Prentice, mission superintendent, led his 78-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Isabel Chalmers, to safety after he found her groping in a cloud of smoke in her third-floor bedroom.

Others who escaped via stairway or fire escape were: Mr. and Mrs. Prentice, Harvey Jr., 15; Ruth and Mary Belle Prentice, children of the Prentices; Miss Pearl Rote, 36, and Miss Jennie May Lunt.

Police believe the fire started in a pile of clothing in the basement. Howard Riley, 28, no fixed address, was found huddled in a basement room. He was treated for slight hip burns.

Southern to Convert 10 Passenger Stations

Richmond, Va., March 29 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today granted the Southern Railway Co. authority to discontinue passenger facilities at 10 stations on the Harrisonburg division.

The SCC listed the stations involved as Gainesville, Haymarket, Marshall, Rectortown, Delaplane, Markham, Maurer Town, Edinburg, Quicksburg, and New Market.

Late in 1947, the SCC granted the railway permission to discontinue passenger service along the Harrisonburg division, so the stations no longer are needed for this service, the petition to the SCC stated.

Prison Food Cost Drops

Ossining, N. Y., March 29 (UP).—Warden William W. Snyder said today the cost of feeding prisoners at Sing Sing Prison has dropped from 48 cents a day in 1947 to 44 cents a day.

Taft Asks Cut In ECA Funds

session tonight and even Thursday night in an effort to speed passage ahead of ECA's April 3 deadline.

Both Lucas and Connally had predicted the entire ECA authorization would be passed "intact" but were somewhat disturbed by the Taft-Russell move.

Lucas termed it a "conservative" blow at the program, adding:

"Make no mistake about it, every reactionary move in this body is water on the wheel of the Democratic Party and the liberal forces in this country."

Lucas recessed the Senate at 9:26 p. m. until 11 a. m. today.

Shortly before the Senate quit, Connally proposed that some 54 million dollars in unexpended China aid funds be made available through December 31 in the ECA bill for expenditures at the President's discretion.

Similar China aid authorization was approved in a separate bill reported Monday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Taft, who earlier had been talking about reducing the 15-month program to 12 months, but with discretion for the President to extend it another three, said he will refer that proposal to the Appropriations Committee.

Denying his proposed 10 per cent slash would restrict the program "very much," he said it was not meant as an "attack" on ECA but as a start on systematic 10 per cent cuts in appropriations to avoid a tax increase.

George had just taken his seat after a speech praising projected Canadian tax cuts as "sound" and warning this country in contrast will have raised taxes five billion dollars unless the budget is cut-back.

"If we increase the budget for the fiscal year 1951 to a level of at least 48 billion dollars, and then put five billion dollars more on taxpayers, we shall have something which will strongly resemble a depression in the United States," said the Georgian.

Taft turned George's speech into an argument for cutting ECA funds.

"If we hope to avoid having to vote to increase taxes in June . . . we shall practically have to cut all of the proposed expenditures," the Ohionan told the Senate.

"Unless we are willing to cut the appropriation for ECA, unless we are willing to begin at this time to make cuts, there will be very little hope of cutting other appropriations."

Later Taft told newsmen: "If we could get a 10 per cent cut all down the line we probably could save a tax increase."

He said he would press for a 10 per cent slash in everything except interest on the debt, other fixed costs and funds for the military establishment. He said he thought the military could be cut by "about a billion."

Senator Russell said he joined Taft in asking a flat 10 per cent ECA cut but wouldn't necessarily go along on across the board cuts in other appropriations.

Like Taft, Russell insisted he favored the ECA program.

"If this fund is prudently handled, we can take 10 per cent off without impairing European recovery," he said.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who like Russell voted to trim ECA outlays, told reporters: "It will pick up my vote."

And George told newsmen he will support it together with 10 per cent cuts "down the line."

ECA debate meanwhile went into its fourth day, with GOP his amendment withholding ECA's funds from the Dutch for failing to comply with Security Council recommendations in Indonesia.

critics still hammering away at the program.

Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah) delivered another attack on the Atlantic Pact and the ECA program anad Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) spoke in support of and in the newspapers these past few days: "Snag" Lewis, Ralph Caparotti, alias "Rags" Costello, "Chee Chee" d'Ambrosio, Freddye Whiteoak.

"In his bookmaking business, said Otillo Acalotti took bets and wagers both on horse races and on the lottery game commonly known as 'and called 'numbers,'" she attested.

Bernice knew about these things while she was employed as a waitress at the Circle Cafe, 1133 14th st. nw., near Thomas Circle, she explained.

Till Alcott, as he is known by his alias, operated a number of profitable sidelines from his newsstand in the same block, she said.

"For example, said Otillo Acalotti informed me that when he desired to lay off any of the bets he took on the phone on horse races as bookmakers commonly do,

BERNICE FRANKLIN
Raiders' aide

he would usually lay off such bets each day to Freddy Whiteoak, or one 'Rags.'"

At Till's request, she frequently laid off the bets for him, Bernice said.

Freddy and "Rags" operated at 1504 Oates st. ne., she said. Freddy was arrested there Friday. "Rags" later turned himself in.

"I knew these men personally because Otillo would settle up with them at the end of each day, many times in my presence," she stated.

". . . this continued in 1948 until some time in September, when Acalotti changed the lay-off man to one whom I knew as 'Chee Chee' . . . whose last name is something like Ambrosia, whose phone number was Hobart 0551," she added.

Surrenders to Commissioner

Umberto (Chee Chee) d'Ambrosio, identified as a newsstand operator at 1223 New York ave. nw., surrendered yesterday to United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

". . . The daily amount of these layoffs to Chee Chee were in the neighborhood of $500 . . ." her statement continues.

There are other things this chic, neatly groomed young woman has swept from her mind since the first of the year.

They concerned love affairs, other than her own; family affairs, her own and those of her acquaintances, and money affairs, of both the "hard-earned" and "easy-come-easy-go" variety.

"After about January 15, 1949, I did not continue to associate with Acalotti, but I saw him occasionally and have talked to him since on the telephone . . ."

Memorable Conversation

One memorable conversation, she recalls, was that of last Friday. It was then she charged Acalotti with telling her by phone to "keep my mouth shut or he would see to it that it was kept shut permanently."

"On or about March 2, 1949, about 4:30 p. m., I saw Acalotti's car, which I knew well, parked right in front of 1223 12th st. nw."

That was the address of Ruth Ensor, "who works with me at the Circle Restaurant . . ."

"On numerous other occasions in the afternoon, I have seen that car of Acalotti's, as well as a new Cadillac he purchased, parked in front of or near that apartment," she continued.

"On or about March 4, 1949, I called Acalotti on the phone at ME. 4662 . . . (it has been changed since).

"At that time I had been interviewed by the law enforcement officers in this city, and when I got Acalotti on the phone, he told me that he knew that and was very angry.

"He said that it was necessary for him to change the place where he ran his business from his apartment to this number, where he said he was then carrying on his business."

Arrested Saturday

It was 1223 12th st. nw. that Attilio Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, was arrested Saturday.

The story told to friends and authorities by Bernice Franklin covers months of time and sheafs of paper.

She has told it repeatedly. She has stuck to the details she set forth at the beginning. And now she reflects on what started it all.

"I know what it is to work for a living; and I know what it is not to work for a better living," she has commented.

Until last Saturday night, she knew. It was then she and Ruth Ensor were informed their services were no longer required at the Circle Cafe.

Device to 'Burn' Airport Fog in Use At Los Angeles

Los Angeles March 29 (NYHT). The world's first commercial installation of an oil-burning system for "burning up" fog at airports was put into operation here tonight.

The system, adapted from a British World II development called Fido (from the military designation (for FOG, intensive, dispersal of), causes the atmosphere to swallow up huge areas of water vapor almost instantly through the large-scale application of heat.

According to Col. Clarence M. Young, general manager of airports here, the "Fido Fog-Eater" will turn flight ceilings of only 75 feet into 400-foot ceilings within two minutes while increasing visibility from three-eighths to three-quarters of a mile.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Boat Blast Hurts 3 Area Residents

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Three Washington area vacationists were burned in a boat explosion here today.

One, Charles M. Beall, jr., an FBI agent of 4611 16th st. nw., was seriously burned on his arms and legs.

The agent's father, Dr. Charles M. Beall, sr., 71, also of the 16th st. address and Mrs. Elanor Gardner, 36, Bethesda, Md., also were in Broward General Hospital for treatment for burns.

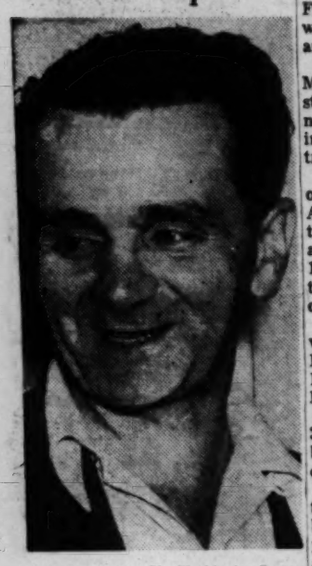

(FBI officials here said Beall was on a vacation trip with his father. A native of Washington, he entered the FBI as a clerk in 1936 and was made a special agent in 1939 after his graduation from the Georgetown University School of Law.—Editor's note.)

Others rescued but uninjured were Capt. Chuck Train, 42, Fort Lauderdale, boat skipper; Harry E. Randall, 68, and Harold W. Kary, 49, both of Fort Lauderdale.

The party of six was aboard a 36-foot boat which exploded, burned and sank about a half mile off the Port Everglades Channel.

Capt. Johnny Ennis of the charter boat Americana sped to the burning craft and found the six persons in the water. Ennis tied a line around his waist and dived overboard. One by one he pulled the victims from the water and hoisted them aboard his boat.

Alleged Gambler Gives Self Up

The Washington Post
UMBERTO D'AMBROSIO
"Chi Chi" Surrenders

District Area Race Wires Cut

would not elaborate. He said he had heard that Barrett said the police did more in one month than he had done in ten, but declined to comment.

Fay said his investigation was "moving along as fast as physically possible."

With D'Ambrosio in the fold, Fay said that to the best of his knowledge only one arrest warrant was outstanding for an individual identified only as "Whitey."

Defense Strategy Indicated

Fay denied persistent rumors that at least two more suspects were being sought, one identified only as "Nancy", and the other only by description.

Some indication of the future defense strategy of the suspected gamblers was found at D'Ambrosio's arraignment yesterday.

Chi-Chi's attorney, Charles E. Ford, asked U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence for the affidavit on which both the warrant to search and the warrant to arrest D'Ambrosio, 37, of 39 Bryant st. nw, had been issued.

Lawrence said that one affidavit, signed by Bernice Franklin, was attached to the search warrant, and that he had issued the arrest warrant on the basis of the same affidavit.

Ford quoted the Constitution as saying that "no warrant, Mr. Commissioner, not no search warrant or no arrest warrant, but no warrant shall be issued without an affidavit."

Ford protested the lack of an arrest warrant and also protested the failure of the United States Attorney's office to grant his client an immediate hearing.

Ford indicated he would seek a court order contraverting the warrant on which D'Ambrosio was arrested.

Fay would not comment on the question which Ford had raised earlier before the Commissioner. For many of the arrests made since Friday's raids, there were arrest and search warrants for the suspects, Lawrence said.

Wire Contracts Subpenaed

Meanwhile Fay announced he had subpenaed the records of contracts between Western Union and the two services which distribute race results to the 26 "drops." These services are Howard Sports Daily, Baltimore, which supplies 11, and State Wide Sports News Distributors, 3701 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md.

Automatic Devices, Inc., of the Bladensburg rd. address, has also been subpenaed to bring in all information relating to the purchase and sale of K-books. These books are used to record numbers lottery information. Fay has said the company buys 1,250,000 tickets a month from a Baltimore concern alone.

Ford was unsuccessful yesterday in his efforts to recover "approximately $20,000," seized Friday in the raid on 4310 46th st., Bladensburg rd., reputed headquarters of William (Snag) Lewis, whom Fay describes as a "big-shot gambler."

Ford says he will seek a court order compelling Fay to relinquish the money. Fay maintains the money is evidence. He would not comment when asked if any of the money was marked.

In Prince Georges County, States Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie returned from a trip to South Carolina to find himself "completely in the dark" about the forays into his territory.

He called Fay to ascertain the facts surrounding the raids, but was unable to reach him.

A county grand jury will open an investigation into gambling on April 8 at Upper Marlboro. The grand jury inquiry has been scheduled for nearly a month.

Pajamas Worn By Only Half Of Men in U. S.

Only about half of the men in the United States wear pajamas, an Agriculture Department poll revealed yesterday.

The poll-takers didn't ask how the other half sleeps.

The bedtime information came to light only incidentally in a survey to determine whether men prefer to have certain clothing items made of cotton, wool, rayon or other fibers. That data is of interest to the textile industry and raw fiber producers.

Altogether, 2203 men in sample areas were polled. They represented a cross-section of 55,500,000 men over 16.

One of the questions was:

"Do you use pajamas as a sleeping garment?"

Fifty-three per cent said "yes"; 47 per cent said "no."

When they said "yes," the poll takers were instructed to ask them what material they preferred. Sixty-eight per cent said cotton.

When they said "no," the poll takers, who included women as well as men, were instructed to drop the matter, and go on to questions about other articles of clothing.

The only item on the list that every man owned was underwear.

The other articles and the number of men who did not own them were: Business (dress) shirts, 4 per cent; summer sport shirts, 35 per cent; wool shirts, 51 per cent; extra trousers, 26 per cent; socks (other than work socks), 2 per cent; summer shirts, 60 per cent; robes, 47 per cent, and raincoats, 36 per cent.

Grand Jury Is Told Of Rowell Beating

Rowell and then walk away, apparently after learning the assailants' identity. Thompson gave police his story more than a month ago.

Mrs. Mary Marra Hyde, Emergency Hospital nurse who told the Washington Post on February 7 that a man she believed to have been Rowell applied to her for treatment between 4:30 a. m. and 5:30 a. m., a few minutes after the beating. She said this man told her his assailants were policemen. Rowell refused treatment when he learned that hospital records would be turned over to police.

Withhold Comment

Ford Saum, night manager at the People's drug store at the time of Rowell beating. He refusel to comment when asked what he had told the jury or whether he had witnessed the beating. Thompson had said earlier that Saum witnessed part of the beating.

Joseph Eugene Head, another People's drug clerk, who also refused comment.

Robert Albert (Slim) Johnson, a Thomas Circle news vendor, who reportedly witnessed the beating. He would not talk to reporters.

The five witnesses appeared before the jury's 2½-hour morning session.

Rowell "Much Better"

Rowell, who said he "felt much better" after two months of recuperation, was the first witness called in the afternoon session. Although earlier witnesses had been dismissed by the jury after their testimony, Rowell was asked to remain after he had completed two hours before the jury.

Following Rowell to the witness stand were two other police officers, Pvts. M. W. McClanahan and D. F. Reid. Both were admittedly in Thomas Circle at the time Rowell was being beaten, but both reported they had arrived on the scene of the beating just in time to see Rowell and his assailants speed off in a car.

Thompson, however, identified McClanahan as one of the two uniformed officers he saw approach the beating, talk quietly to the beaters, and then walk slowly away. Neither officer would comment.

Thompson also said that Saum had identified McClanahan as one of the uniformed officers.

Others to Testify

Other witnesses who will be called up Thursday morning include:

Gerald Richard Barnes, 33-year-old cab driver, arrested by Roche and Bonaccorsy a few minutes after and a few blocks away from the Rowell beating. Barnes told The Washington Post that the two officers fired shots at him, beat him, and forced him to enter a vacant building at 10th and U sts. nw. Barnes was arrested on charges of selling whisky illegally. He denies the charge, and his case has been mysteriously continued four times since January 14, on each occasion at Government request.

Attilio Acalotti, 40, alias Till Alcott, whom United States Attorney George Morris Fay has described as a long-time Thomas Circle curbside bootlegger and bookie.

Free Under $4000 Bond

Acalotti is one of 33 men arrested during the last five days as a result of the special grand jury investigation into District gambling. He is free under $1500 bond on a gambling charge and under $2500 bond on a charge of threatening a Government witness, Bernice Franklin, once Acalotti's friend and now a Government undercover agent.

Leo Hennessy, a cab driver, who refused to talk to reporters. All witnesses were warned by the grand jury that they were liable to a citation for contempt of court if they talked about the case as long as they were under subpena.

The last witness scheduled to testify tomorrow is Donnia DeGriffion, Rowell's brother-in-law. He, too, would not give any reason as to why he should be called in connection with the case.

3 Escape Injury As Plane Landing Gear Collapses

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—Stanley N. Brown of Leesburg, Va., a director of the Koppers Co., escaped injury along with two pilots when a plane owned by the company collapsed on its landing gear in taking off here last night.

The plane scooted along a municipal airport runway on its belly at 100 miles an hour for about 1000 feet.

Brown credited Byron Q. Vancott of Pittsburgh, pilot of the plane, with averting a serious smashup. Also aboard was Arthur Ulrich of Pittsburgh copilot.

Reserve Governor Has No Fear of Drastic Deflation

The United States' economy is in no danger of drastic deflation, Lawrence Clayton, member of the Federal Reserve System's seven-man board of governors, assured the American Retail Federation yesterday.

"There is no justifiable implication in the figures that we are headed for a severe depression," Clayton said in an extemporaneous speech before the group's annual meeting at the Hotel Statler.

He replaced Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), scheduled as speaker at the luncheon, but detained at the last minute on the Senate floor.

Referring to the Reserve Board's relaxation of stock margin requirements and to the lowering of installment buying curbs, Clayton said:

"I hope it's clear that in our modest action . . . we are not differing fundamentally with groups such as the President's Council of Economic Advisors."

Doctor Cites Peril Of Infants' Eczema

Parents here were warned last night not to minimize the dangers of their infants' eczema.

It may be the first sign of a sensitivity that will plague the child progressively through an allergy-troubled life, said Dr. Eloise Kailin, Washington allergist.

The danger is particularly acute, she added, if both parents have had allergy troubles.

Dr. Kailin, Washington representative of the National Pollen and Molds Survey Committees, spoke on "Hay Fever, Asthma and the Allergies," at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw.

She urged parents to take rigid preventive measures to protect allergic children from the foods, pollens and other irritants to which their systems react.

"There is a tendency for earlier manifestations of allergy to be ignored because they are later outgrown," warned Dr. Kailin. "The trouble with this is that other forms of allergy so frequently supplant the earlier manifestations that are ignored."

Dr. Kailin said statistics showed that 50 to 80 per cent of children bothered with eczema in infancy developed asthma later.

Another example of the progressive nature of allergies, the speaker said, is that almost one out of every three sufferers of ragweed hay fever eventually develop ragweed asthma.

However, she said, if one can control one form of allergy the victim is least likely to develop the other, more serious forms.

Thus, said Dr. Kailin, it is most important that parents be diligent in preventive measures whenever their child is potentially an allergy sufferer.

She suggested plain cereals for infant feedings with one "safety" diet—foods the child has never had which may be given if the child develops allergies to other food substances.

Allergy prevention should extend to environmental factors, Dr. Kailin said. The allergic child should be protected from colds; exposure to animal dander, feathers; and tonsillectomy should be avoided during the pollen seasons.

Doctors Ask Big Pay Hike In Britain

London, March 29 (NYHT.)—More than 400 members of the so-called Doctors' Parliament, representing the British Medical Association, decided today to press Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan for a pay increase which would come to 66 million dollars.

The more rabid opponents of Bevan and the health plan proposed mass resignations of doctors from the plan unless more pay was forthcoming.

The meeting decided a doctor can properly look after a list of 4000 patients. It rejected a resolution recommending that lists be cut from their present maximum of 4000 to 3000. For each name on his list a doctor receives from the government about $3.40 a year.

One of the chief criticisms by the medical profession has been that the health plan forces doctors to see too many patients, thereby reducing the standard of medical attention.

Missouri House Votes to End Race Ban in Colleges

Jefferson City, Mo., March 29 (AP).—The Missouri House of Representatives today voted 92-25 on second reading to end racial discrimination at the State university, the School of Mines, and five State teachers' colleges. The measure now faces a third reading and upon passage after that would go to the Senate.

The action of the House followed by one day the decision of the Missouri Medical Association, in annual convention in Kansas City, in dropping racial restrictions against Negro members of the medical profession.

There were no strings attached to the bill. It stated flatly that "any otherwise qualified resident citizen of this State, who complies with all other applicable requirements, regardless of race, color, creed or religion, shall be admitted" to the tax-supported institutions of higher learning.

Eastern Airlines Ground Employes Get Pay Increase

Miami, Fla., March 29 (AP).—An agreement bringing increased pay to 2400 employes in 16 States has been signed between Eastern Air Lines, Inc., and District 100, International Association of Machinists.

Ed Chambers, general chairman of District 100, and L. M. Fagan, grand lodge representative, said the agreement was signed in the office of S. L. Shannon, vice president in charges of EAL operations. The union represents mechanics, storekeepers and ground service employes.

The agreement, effective as of last October 16, represents an average increase of more than nine cents an hour for all employes and involves payment of more than $200,000 in back pay to the employes, the announcement said.

Increases are automatic from the bottom to the top of the mechanical group. Under the agreement, mechanics will receive more than $1.75 an hour.

Sisters Found Starving Amid Mounds of Food

Paola, Kans., March 29 (AP).—Two starving sisters and the body of their brother were found today in a farm house cluttered with mountainous piles of food and clothing.

Coroner William Brown said the sisters, Mandy Stachling, 65, and Mattie Stachling, 63, were found in a bed under a huge pile of bedclothing. Neither was able to talk.

He said the brother, Albert P. Stachling, 70, had been dead about 10 days and apparently had died of malnutrition.

Archeologists Open Egyptian B. C. Tomb

Sakkara, Egypt, March 29 (AP).—Archeologists opened today the rock-hewn tomb of five Egyptians believed to have lived centuries before Christ.

The tomb is about 100 feet below ground at Sakkara, cemetery of ancient Egypt's capital of Memphis.

Lowered down the shaft the archeologists found themselves in a gloomy chamber about five feet high. Through a chink in the wall they could see three wooden coffins on the floor of an adjoining room. In front of the coffins stood about 200 tiny statuettes of blue glazed pottery.

On one of these bearded statuettes was the name Kanufeir. Other hieroglyphics on the figure disclosed that Kanufeir was scribe in the temple of Ptah, a God of ancient Memphis.

Dr. Etienne Drioton of the Egyptian pyramid project, said he believed Kanufeir lived during the twenty-sixth dynasty of Egyptian Pharaohs, or about 600 years before Christ. He based his estimate on the style of the statuette and the similarity of the tomb to other twenty-sixth dynasty tombs previously found.

The Sales Tax Wins

Washington's imperative need for additional revenue was finally recognized by the House yesterday when it voted 216 to 180 for a combination tax bill featuring a 2 per cent sales tax. A similar measure had been voted down recently, but a majority of our city councilmen (all of them elected from outside the District, of course) apparently came to realize that the District budget simply could not be cut by 18 million dollars without causing appalling hardship. No doubt Senator McGrath's threat to seek an 18-million-dollar increase in the Federal payment to the District helped a good many Representatives to see the light. They accepted the sales tax as the lesser evil.

Many District residents favored the Granger plan, which would have broadened the base of the present income-tax law, increased property taxes, swelled the Federal payment and authorized borrowing to finance long-term improvements. The critical weakness in that plan was the hostility of the House toward its various elements as demonstrated over a long period of years. That program went down to defeat again on Monday, as we had assumed it would. The vote against the Granger plan and the subsequent approval of the bill sponsored by the District Committee and the House leadership underlines our repeated contention that the sales tax offers the most feasible alternative to a crippling cut in expenditures.

In addition to making up the city's revenue deficit, the bill has much to commend it. While it lessens the importance of the income tax by increasing the personal exemption to $4000, the tax would be levied on "residents" living here for more than seven months of the taxable year. The present inequitable tax exempts a vast number of Government employes who claim to be domiciled elsewhere. The new bill exempts only a handful of "residents," including the President, Vice President, members of Congress and the President's high appointees holding office at his pleasure. This is a victory in principle and may well mean that the personal exemption can be lowered in future years without going back to the discriminations of the present law. In any event, an equitable income tax applying to all the higher brackets has been combined with a sales tax that will reach both high- and low-income groups. If the Senate changes the bill, we hope it will be only by way of increasing the Federal payment.

Seeds Of Crime

Surely there is a direct correlation between the gambling rings uncovered by United States Attorney Fay and Washington's disgraceful position as first in crime among America's cities. Proof is provided by the experience of Tampa, Fla., described in this newspaper Monday. For four months Tampa authorities have carried out a tough crackdown on the rackets there, especially numbers betting. The ban has resulted in a reduction of 3165 in the number of arrests for law violations.

The raids staged last Friday by Mr. Fay's office represent the first serious attempt to attack Washington crime at one of its roots. For his courage in stepping into a field shunned by police Mr. Fay deserves the appreciation and backing of all Washingtonians who recognize the other vices that organized gambling inevitably leads to. The problem, in its practical phase, is not primarily one of morals. Indeed, little is to be gained by holier-than-thou moralizing about the urge to assume risks in the hope of larger returns—something that in the broad sense is the foundation of the capitalist system. Rather, the problem is to arouse public awareness of the easy avenue which organized gambling provides for the operations of the underworld.

The experience of Washington and every other city shows that it is impossible to divorce commercial gambling from the rackets. For gambling depends on the underworld for its big spenders. It depends, moreover, on the connivance, or at least the benevolent acquiescence, of police. And a police force prone to wink at one category of law violations will be more disposed to overlook others. Policemen who are involved in this sort of "protection" are easy targets for bribery and blackmail.

The tacit alliance between organized gambling and the underworld leads inevitably to other forms of vice which a corrupted police force cannot stop. Prostitution, narcotics, gangs, robberies and killings are all associated with organized gambling. Where vice becomes a big business, there are vested interests to safeguard and the underworld becomes a law unto itself. The threat of rival syndicates muscling in has produced some of the bloodiest purges of all, as the Capone gang wars showed.

Gambling, furthermore, is one of the principal recruiting agencies for the underworld. Gambling debts are responsible for many an embezzlement and robbery. Nor does gambling remain an adult concern. The numbers racket, reportedly, has been introduced in Washington schools. It is but a step from this to the spreading of marijuana and dope among school children.

The United States attorney's office has entered the picture because District police have done little other than furnish the names of gambling operators. Now Superintendent Barrett has requested the advice of the Commissioners' trouble shooter, Mr. Daniel B. Maher, in drawing up a report on police efforts against gambling. This whole project, as indicated in Major Barrett's press conference yesterday, seems designed to show that police have done more in one month than Mr. Fay and the grand jury have in ten.

This sort of backhanded competition between the police superintendent and the prosecutor obscures the issue and reveals a complete misunderstanding of the police function. The job of police is to make arrests for law violations, arrests based on charges that will stand up in court. It is precisely because of the inattention to this detail—specifically in the failure to obtain warrants—that several gambling cases have been muffed. We hope that Mr. Maher will not lend himself to a whitewash. The best indication Superintendent Barrett could give that he is seriously trying to clean up organized gambling would be to concentrate on obtaining the kind of evidence that courts will accept—something he ought to know how to do full well even without Mr. Maher's advice.

It's Official

Marriner S. Eccles, explaining the lowering of margin requirements for the purchase of stock market securities, says the action should be regarded as official recognition that the United States is no longer in an inflation, but, instead, in a deflation. Logically, the Administration's anti-inflation program, particularly in the contraction of credit, has thus become out of date. Now is the time for the accelerator, not the brake. Traditionally the Government has always lagged behind the business indicators in the use of its machinery for influencing the ups and downs of prices. Will history repeat itself? The answer depends upon the resiliency of mind of the officials who in our present "compensatory system" are virtually charged with the maintenance of economic stability.

In this respect we recall recent examples of official unwillingness to acknowledge in word let alone in deed this radical transformation in business conditions. President Truman said on March 3 that the prices that had gone down were farm prices and that metal prices were still spiraling upward. No doubt the statement was made on the say-so of one or other of his economic advisers. It was an instance of the myopia that afflicts planners when facts are not to their political taste. For the inaccuracy of the presidential statement was apparent from market reports. Sellers' markets were disappearing, many prices were falling, and a general downswing was obvious even to the layman. Indications were plentiful of the disappearance of gray markets and premiums in almost all lines where they had existed.

Since March 3 the signs of the turn in business conditions have multiplied. Steel scrap has declined further; lead, zinc and copper scrap has fallen sharply; and prices of lead have been reduced three times. The price of copper scrap is down below the parity for the official price for refined copper. In the absence of large purchases for stockpiling—which should be guided by market trends and should not be allowed to interfere with economic adjustments in process—this indicates a decline in copper in the reasonably near future. Apart from the metals, there have been reductions in many products such as galvanized metal products—a reflection of lower zinc prices. The recession does not require an economist, even a politician-economist, to detect. It is as plain as the nose on your face, though we agree with Mr. Eccles that there is no reason to expect a serious depression.

Prevention of a sizable slump is the responsibility, however, of business as well as Government. In times like these the business community must have the courage and foresight to plan for good instead of bad times. In the present situation, resistance to price reductions is futile as well as retrogressive. The need is rather for determined efforts to reduce production costs and maintain sales volume by charging prices that the public is able and willing to pay. The basis for sustained buying is insured so long as employment remains at high levels. And it will remain high if businessmen are not stampeded by fear of a depression into curtailing their operations unduly and throwing large numbers of employes out of work.

Some shifting of workers is, of course, essential as abnormally large postwar demands for certain goods are satisfied. Some marginal high-cost concerns will disappear, too, as prices settle at lower levels. Such adjustments are, however, a normal feature of any dynamic society. They cause temporary hardship to a limited number of people, but benefit the public as a whole. It is folly and worse to assume that present price and income relationships are an insurance against future economic disaster. On the contrary, these relationships still reflect the distortions of a prolonged period of inflation that call for remedial action.

If the public, and more particularly its business and labor leaders, keep that thought in mind, they will look toward the future with confidence, and that very optimism will be the best possible safeguard against a depression. As Mr. Eccles says, a cutback in prices in present circumstances of supply, with buyers' markets having taken the place of sellers' markets, is "healthy," and will stay healthy if Government and private authorities act with the wisdom that comes from attention to realities.

Middle Of The Road

Political consolidation in France is helped by the victory of the middle-of-the-road coalition over the Communist Party and General de Gaulle's Rally of the French People in the county elections. For it was the extremist parties which gave these elections the atmosphere of a general election. The success will be felt in Paris by the centrist government under Henri Queuille. This dauntless little man became Prime Minister of France September 10 of last year. A Radical Socialist by politics, a country physician by vocation, he headed a coalition of the center, which was even then being ground between the two extremes in French politics. The pundits gave him only a few weeks of life in office. Doubtless he himself did not harbor great expectations, for the instability of politics has become a tradition in France, largely due to French fears of strong government. However, over six months have passed, and Queuille, far from losing his hold, is increasing it. In the county elections his middle-of-the-road government has polled well over 50 per cent of the total vote.

Queuille's success is due partly to the quiet determination of his cabinet, partly to the stumbling back to recovery of the French economy. As Minister of the Interior, Jules Moch, a Socialist in politics, handled the coal strike last fall with courage and adroitness. The Communists made the strike into a holdup against the Marshall Plan. They were frustrated, and Queuille capitalized the newly won prestige of the government by obtaining from the Assembly powers to straighten out the fiscal mess. Premier Queuille began to show the French that they had in him one of the shrewdest parliamentarians of his generation. He was helped by the brilliant Maurice Petsche of the Peasant Party. Petsche displayed an energy for which he had not hitherto been credited. A loan was oversubscribed, partly as the result of the standby tax powers given to the government in case of failure. This success in turn stopped the flight from the franc, and the black market rate rose sharply in the direction of the official rate. Meantime the person at the helm of foreign affairs had been eliciting the respect of his opposite numbers abroad. Robert Schuman (Catholic Popular Republican Party, or MRP), who is in Washington this week for the signing of the Atlantic Pact, is a quiet and studious Lorrainer to whose knowledgeability and common sense and integrity Secretary Marshall several times has testified.

But the rise in French indexes of recovery give the real clew to the lastingness of Henri Queuille. France is almost Nature's pet as a country. And it was Nature that broke the black market which had most French housewives in its clutches when Queuille took office. A glut of potatoes forcing their way into urban markets seems to have started a break in the cost of living. The process is still going on, and the so-called third force government, in consequence, is reaping the political advantage.

How the Communists and De Gaulle will counter a trend that is now augmented by Queuille's electoral success is problematical. Both have been playing what the French call "politics of the worst," and both have at least been temporarily confounded. They might again try to sell France short in the currency market. This was done with so much success last year that, with the aid of nonpolitical speculators, the franc was driven down to 550 to the dollar, or nearly 250 below its open-market rate. Premier Queuille and his Minister of Finance might be well advised now to take measures for the conservation of the harvest of tourist dollars that will soon begin to roll into France again. In the meantime, Queuille deserves congratulations, as a Roman Senator did, for his faith in the republic.

Brief Blossoms

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
—A Shropshire Lad.

When A. E. Housman wrote his tribute to the beauty of cherry blossoms he might well have been affected, as other poets have been, by their fleeting shortness of life. It just goes to show that poets don't know much about practical matters. Chemistry, for instance. Perhaps chemists don't often write immortal poetry, either. But at least a couple of them right here in Washington have come up with a method of prolonging the life of cherry blossoms.

The idea frightens us a little bit—just as the chemicals do. How would you like to be sprayed with naphthaleneacetic acid? How would you like a shower bath of beta-naphthoxyacetic acid? Sounds pretty ominous to us and we hope the wind hasn't blown any of it our way. The Washington Post Building is old enough already without having its life expectancy extended by any artificial hocus-pocus.

These acid solutions, the names of which we won't inflict on you again, are being sprayed on all but 25 of the Japanese cherry trees around the Tidal Basin. The holdouts are a control group left alone for the purpose of comparison. In fact, the whole business is something of a test. Alternate trees are getting bathed in one acid or the other to see which will work better. The expected result is a blossom life of five days beyond the normal six or seven.

We hope it works this time, just because Nature played a perverse trick in bringing on the blossoms ahead of man-made schedule. But we hope the chemists won't try to go any further. Tricks on Nature too easily get out of hand and upset its delicate balance. Besides, the poetical beauty associated with the evanescence of the cherry blossoms would be lost by having them all year around.

Correction

A typographical error in our Monday editorial, "Sales Tax Again," conveyed a wrong impression. One sentence of the editorial as printed read: "Similarly, an increase in rates under the present equitable income taxes sufficient to produce enough revenue to balance the District budget would impose additional burdens on lower-income groups, in many cases more onerous than sales taxes." We meant, of course, "the present inequitable income taxes."

From Pact To Union

Most emphatically the United States should ratify the Atlantic Pact. But we should do so realizing that we shall not solve our problem unless we go further and form an Atlantic, or better yet, a democratic union.

We should start, formally by inviting every people even slightly accustomed to free thought, free speech, free press and free elections to send representatives to a constitutional convention. The powers of the federal democratic union would be limited to those essential for trade, communications, defense and the guarantee throughout its territories of the civil liberties of individual citizens. Admission would be open to all peoples whenever they might apply, provided only they ratify the constitution and acept its bill of rights.

I ask you, what has the alliance to offer? A one-way "mutual" assistance pact; a promise to foot Europe's deficits in toto, including such arms as will give importance and self-respect to their respective military castes. It offers assurance that our team is sufficiently satisfied with the status quo so that we will fight to maintain it.

The world is crying for legitimate means of protecting its people from the lethal consequences of the pride and follies of their governments. We need international machinery for developing the world for the benefit of its people. In short we must have a government operating not by private deals between chiefs of states but a government by law, enforceable upon individuals, with equal penalties for equal offenses.

President Monroe in promulgating the Monroe Doctrine told the world that any attempt of European powers to extend their influence into the Americas would be "viewed as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States." He promised that we'd stay out of Europe too. No threat of any force or violence!

America has always been God's new chance with a Nation that threatened no other nation, as the Atlantic Pact would do. Shall America build up a Pax Americanna? It may stave off the catastrophe for a little while; but in the end it will engulf and ruin the world.

Escaping Taxes

I feel compelled to answer the disparaging remarks made by the Texas Congressman who was defending the nonpayment of Virginia income taxes by his secretary. Does he expect Virginia to disregard her laws when they are disobeyed? I would have very little regard for Texas if I were a resident there and could willfully avoid paying her taxes without fear of punishment.

As for his remarks that "Virginia has fallen a long way since the days of her competence and prestige," may I point out that our great President during the first World War, Woodrow Wilson was a Virginian. Also, today we have that eminent statesman, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, who is nationally admired for his integrity.

We Virginians are getting tired of these outsiders who come down here to bask in our traditional glory but who love to indulge in criticism. We didn't ask them to come and they are always welcome to leave, but while they are here they should abide by our laws as I would if I were a resident of their State.

Five-Cent Milk

I read recently of a trend being started toward return of the 5-cent glass of beer. Fine for the beer drinkers! But a return to the 5-cent glass of milk would be more salubrious for the entire Nation. HARVEY SACKSER.

Fay's Gambling Raid

United States Attorney Fay's raid on gambling has all the earmarks of a holy and righteous crusade against big time operators here, but the average citizen who has lived here for a period of 20 years knows this is just another smokescreen thrown up by the D. A., in order to relieve the pressure from public opinion.

The flagrant "snubbing" of the Police Department by the district attorney's office in staging the latest raid is a vivid display of lack of cooperation or lack of confidence in one another. The actions of the D. A. would imply that he sought public credit for himself at the expense of the police chief.

Whatever esteem Mr. Fay may have captured in this sensational raid must be reckoned with the local processes of jurisprudence. Over a period of years, we have seen all types of racketeers hauled into court but seldom have they gone beyond the courtrooms.

The records show that this city leads all others of comparable size in the existence of crime. Mr. Fay claims that racketeering is handling well over 100 million dollars a year in this area. These facts prove the efficiency, precision and unity of the forces of crime. The law enforcement agencies could profit by these methods of molding a more effective process of unity by which to combat crime.

Increased Steel Capacity

The March 21 full page McGraw-Hill advertisement in The Washington Post declares war on the President's proposal to encourage increased steel capacity. "Socialism" Mr. McGraw calls it, saying that the recent election "gave no mandate for socialism."

The idea that Government lend money to assist private industry to expand productive capacity is literally soaked in American tradition.

Nor is it a novel proposal that the Government build additional steel capacity if no private enterprise can be found to do it. Industry generally, and the steel industry in particular, refused to provide the new plants required for winning the war. The Government had to convince industry leaders that more plants were needed, had to make loans and tax concessions to get industry to build plants, and still had to build the greater part of them itself. Since the war, industry has been glad to take these plants off the Government's hands at a fraction of their cost.

The steel industry is not keeping pace with our peacetime needs. In the past 10 years, manufacturing industry as a whole expanded capacity 56 per cent, but steel only 15 per cent. For the next five years, manufacturers plan to expand capacity 13 per cent, but steel only 3 per cent. Mr. McGraw might have put these facts in his ad, since they are taken from a survey which his company has just completed.

There is good reason to suspect that the cry of "socialism" is a tear-gas barrage laid down to mask a drive to cut corporation taxes and to fix up the law so they can charge off against taxes in five years any new plants they build.

Consumers have been made to pay prices which not only cover production costs plus a profit, but also provide large capital funds for expansion. Now with lower profits in sight, the champions of large enterprise want to switch from the consumer to the small taxpayer as their source of "costless capital." What tax concessions they win the rest of us will have to pay. Sales taxes are the most likely means of socking it to us.

As compared with tax subsidies, the President's proposal is a shining model of free enterprise. It might give a break to businessmen who have the courage and the imagination to invade monopoly controlled industries.

Congress has an immediate responsibility to consider the President's proposal and to examine the big-business objections to it. It should check the report that in 1948 manufacturers did not find investment uses for all the profits they retained after taxes. It should ascertain whether plans for expansion are based on the expectation of full employment year after year or are based on the belief that economic depression will soon again throw millions of people out of work.

The President's proposal rejects the idea that depressions are inevitable. He along with the majority of the American people believes that depressions are man-made and that we have the democratic right to expect our Government to act to avoid depressions with their mass unemployment and their tragic human and economic waste.

But it is becoming daily more clear that there are people in positions of great economic power who neither believe in nor desire full employment at the increasingly higher standard of living made possible by improved technology. They draw comfort from the so-called "balance" between supply and demand. It means nothing to them that by throwing people out of work and drying up purchasing power we are getting into balance by bringing demand down to supply instead of building supply up to demand. This is the short road back to booms and busts.

If steel and other basic industries are not expanding capacity by enough to make full employment possible year after year, the people need to know that and the people need to know what the Government is going to do about it.

Half-Century Inventory

By Malvina Lindsay

What Price Science!

AS THE CENTURY nears its middle turn a rash of appraisal and looking ahead has broken out. One current example is the mid-century convocation this week at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at which former Prime Minister Winston Churchill speaks.

The theme of the convocation, "The Social Implications of Scientific Progress," suggests that Americans, despite the miraculous gadgets the first half of the century has brought them, recognize they still lack something. Replete now with motor cars, airplanes, radios, television sets, household robots, master to a high degree of space and time, successful invaders of new frontiers of sound, they yet face that tough old unconquered combatant, human nature.

Many of the wisest men of this and other countries, including scientists, industrialists, educators, statesmen, philosophers, are in Boston looking into the big question marks that loom ahead in the second 50 years. One that overshadows even conflict between nations is: How are inhabitants of this planet to keep on eating with population rapidly outdistancing resources?

The M. I. T. discussion of this is called "Man Against Nature; the Problem of World Production." Among proposed preventives of global starvation that the panel will go into are: Elimination of plant and animal diseases; scientific consideration of the ecology of whole regions; increase of agricultural activity of backward areas; substitution of new materials for old; more widespread application of scientific knowledge—and even the controversial limitation of population.

WHAT TO DO in the underdeveloped areas of the world is a question recently given special emphasis by President Truman's proposal that this country take the lead in assisting them to develop. One of the complications the Boston panels will tackle is the new approach made necessary by decline of colonial systems. The panels also will grapple with the question: How can we be assured that as progress takes place in underdeveloped areas, racial tensions, labor unrest, class distinctions and mass hysteria will not dangerously increase, or opportunity be given communism and totalitarianism to spread their grip?

Philosophers at the convocation will go into the question of the free mind, which questions ulterior authority, versus the schooled mind, which for its own good accepts regimentation of systems of economics, political science and theology. Another question is: How much individual liberty can exist in a world of institutions

Still another decision for the years ahead is how far specialization should be carried. Is the country turning out too many "learned ignoramuses"? Are too many workers experts in putting in a certain kind of bolt? And finally: Should the specialist (such as the atomic scientist) assume responsibility for the effect of his work on civilization?

THIS TYPE of looking forward by the heavy thinkers at the M. I. T. convocation both parallels and contrasts the national appraisal and surveying that took place at the turn of the century. Then as now the Nation was proud of its scientific advancement and its material accomplishment—epitomized in exhibits at the Buffalo Pan-American Exposition at which President McKinley was assassinated.

Then as now the Nation was breaking with past isolationism, as "imperialism" and "manifest destiny" became the phrases of the day. But the mental looking ahead then was far more nationalistic, far more material, than that for which the M. I. T. discussions are setting a pattern.

If any clairvoyancy on future problems took place around 1900, it probably concerned itself with where the administration of the recently acquired Hawaii, the Philippines, Guam, Puerto Rico and Samoa would take this country; what would come of rising labor unrest; if and how the trusts should be curbed; what would happen to the full dinner pail if the business boom following the Spanish-American War should turn into a bust. For then it was too early—or else people were too naive—to worry about world starvation, Communists in the jungles, one-track minds in laboratories, one-track skills on assembly lines, and the crushing of individual liberty between the millstones of machines and institutions.

Landlord's Lament

"Suffering Tenant" (letter published March 21), seems most uninformed concerning finances. He speaks of his landlord buying 12 houses at $9250 each, with a down payment of $12,000. And look, he says, at his return, renting the houses at $86 a month!

Doesn't he realize that after the $12,000 the landlord still owed someone $99,000? This remainder could be broken up into no less than two trusts, and interest even at a low rate would be about $4000 a year. Taxes would amount to about $2000 a year. Insurance on the trusts would be high. He also probably had a considerable title company charge originally for settlement and title searching.

The houses would cost him about $7000 a year to carry, without repairs or special assessments, and no reduction of his $99,000. His return on his $111,000 investment would be less than 5 per cent. No wonder he makes his own repairs!

SUFFERING LANDLORD.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

'Enemies Of Truth

NEW YORK.—The picket line and the mass demonstration have long been a form of violent political expression here in this teeming, febrile crossroads of the world. Only yesterday were the demonstrations, the clashes, the picket lines, that marked the feverish period preceding World War II.

Childs

Often in that period the political lines shifted with dismaying rapidity. There was that strange time when the Communists in New York, in response to the Soviet-Nazi Pact, abrubtly joined up with the isolationists and hurled such epithets as "imperialist warmonger" at anyone who dared to say the Nazis were a menace to peace.

Observing what happened here during the past weekend, one must admit, however sadly and reluctantly, that the symptoms of that earlier period are recurring. The temperature is ominously rising. The hatreds and fears are mounting.

But there was one meeting which was a kind of calm at the center of the whirlwind—a quiet place where men and women were profoundly concerned about truth. That was the meeting held at Freedom House by American for Intellectual Freedom.

One after another the speakers told, with abundant documentation, how the freedom of the poet to write, the freedom of the musician to compose, the freedom of the scientist to inquire and experiment, are being destroyed in the Soviet Union. It was a frightening picture of spreading darkness decreed by an all-powerful dictatorship.

THESE SPEAKERS did not claim that all is perfect in this country. Far from it! They pointed to the all-to-frequent interference here with the basic freedoms. But, as they pointed out, the right to protest, to criticize, to demand redress, is very much alive. In Russia the answer to even the mildest criticism is the concentration camp.

One speaker who made a deep impression was Dr. H. S. Muller, professor of zoology at Indiana University. Dr. Muller is a Nobel Prize winner in genetics, which is the branch of biology dealing with heredity.

He began in his quiet, schoolmaster's voice, speaking about what a tender growth science is. The right of free inquiry and free experimentation is so new in the world. It has come at the end of a long, long struggle against various forms of absolutism and tyranny.

Then he began to talk about something he had seen at first-hand in Soviet Russia. Dr. Muller had come to know the leaders of the science of genetics in Moscow. They were brilliant men who worked tirelessly and organized persistently to push back the horizon of knowledge.

BUT THE political bosses at the top of the Communist Party in Russia decided that the conclusions of the geneticists were contrary to political doctrine. They began systematically to tear down the whole organization the genetic scientists had built up.

Under pressure some of the scientists "confessed" their guilt. Others were banished. In 1940 the most famous geneticist, N. I. Vavilov, former head of the Lenin Academy of Agricultural Science, was arrested. He died in Siberia in 1942, his important papers destroyed.

"About seven month ago." Dr. Muller said, "the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union officially repudiated the entire science of genetics and approved in its stead a group of superstitions that hark back to ancient times."

The official belief rigidly enforced today is that human beings who live under a superior environment will tend to become innately superior. Those who live in an inferior—and this can be translated capitalist—environment become innately inferior. This is directly contrary to all the patient findings of several generations of scientists. As Dr. Muller pointed out, it repeats the Nazi creed of innate master and subject races and classes.

Some of us may be inclined to say, "Well, what of it? That is going on a long way off and it doesn't concern me very much anyway." But it must be the concern of every free citizen today to make sure that the pursuit of truth is not encroached upon by the enemies of truth at home or abroad.

A long time ago Socrates asked, "What is truth?" His searching questions so got under the skin of the political bosses of his day that they put him to death. But the search for truth still goes on.

British Loyalty Oath Rejected by Attlee

London, March 29 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee today rejected a Conservative suggestion to make all civil servants take an oath of loyalty. Attlee said such an oath did not protect the nation.

"I should not have thought myself that a person who was preparing to engage in treason would boggle at an oath or two," he explained in Commons.

Building Fund Boosts Asked

President Truman yesterday sent to Congress a request for increased building funds for Howard University to use in the current fiscal year.

Included in the request were $194,460 in additional funds for planning new men's dormitory units, a new law school building, administration building, biology building and greenhouse.

The message also asked that the cost limit for the engineering building at Howard be increased from $1,788,000 to $2,120,000, and that the limit on costs of new women's dormitory units be boosted from $1,379,000 to $2,000,000.

For planning the building expansion program, Congress granted $207,240 in the 1948 fiscal year. But, according to Frank Pace, jr., Budget Director, the original sum for plans was based on a much lower estimate of the total cost of the Howard building program.

He said with nine buildings authorized, the first attempt to place a contract on the women's dormitory last August resulted in bids that were greatly in excess of the authorized cost limit.

Taylor Due to Defend Self in Court Today

Birmingham, Ala., March 29 (AP).—Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho) is scheduled to appear here Wednesday at an appeal hearing on a disorderly conduct conviction.

Taylor said he would "fight the charges as far as it is necessary or as far as I can go."

The Idaho Senator was arrested while trying to enter a Negro meeting in Birmingham, May 1. The arresting officer, Patrolman W. W. Casey, testified Taylor attempted to use a door reserved for Negroes.

A Police Court fined Taylor $50 and gave him a suspended sentence of 180 days last May 5.

on record as believing the sales tax to be the only practical present solution to the District revenue problem, said the House-approved bill would be considered at the committee meeting Tuesday.

A Senate subcommittee, headed by Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) joined the Smith subcommittee of the House in working out the original sales tax bill. A member of the Senate group, Senator Frear, (D., Del.) said that while he opposes the idea of the sales tax, he believes it will pass the Senate, and does not intend to make a fight against it. He said he would prefer to see the sales levy enacted for a limited period, one or two years.

The bill also calls for:

1. A 15-cent increase in the District property tax rate, which is now $2 per $100. This, however, would apply only to real property, and not to personal property.

2. A 50 per cent increase in liquor license fees. Liquor would also be subject to the sales tax.

3. A reduction from $10,000 to $5000 in the unincorporated business tax exemption, and a limit on the amount an unincorporated business can deduct as a "reasonable allowance" for salaries. The limit would be fixed at 20 per cent of net income.

4. An increase in the basic personal income tax exemption in the District law from $1000 to $4000 effective on income received after December 31, 1949. While the exemption would then be raised, the allowance a taxpayer gets for a spouse would be cut from $1000 to $500. Exemptions for other dependents remain at $500.

The income tax, for those who would pay it under the higher exemption, would also cover not only persons domiciled in the District, as the present law does, but persons who live here seven months or more in the year. There would be full credit in the District tax for income taxes and intangible property taxes paid in the States. Congressmen, presidential appointees confirmed by the State, and members of congressional staffs who are domiciled in the State of their boss, would be exempt.

Under present District income tax laws, the official salaries of Federal employes are exempt if they are domiciled in one of the States.

The sales tax and the changes in liquor license fees would become effective the first day of the first month which comes 60 days after signing of the bill.

The real estate tax rate increase would be effective for the fiscal year starting July 1. The unincorporated business exemption change would apply to this year's income.

Britain Lists Constitutional Parley April 21

London, March 29 (NYHT).—A conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers to decide the future constitutional structure of the Commonwealth system was announced to Commons today by Prime Minister Attlee.

The conference will convene in London on April 21. Its importance is underlined by the fact that Prime Ministers will attend in person from all seven Commonwealth countries, with the possible exception of Canada.

Canadian Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent may send Lester B. Pearson, Canada's Secretary for External Affairs. The heads of the Australian, New Zealand, South African, Indian, Pakistan and Ceylon governments will be present.

The meetings will deal with the constitutional problem confronting the British nations with the decision of India to assume full and independent status as a Republic.

The one link that binds the Commonwealth countries is the British crown. Thus, the problem is the finding of a formula that permits a nation that has no king to remain associated with the Commonwealth.

Fleet to Get New Cruiser

Philadelphia, March 29 (U.P.).—The 30-million-dollar USS Roanoke, described as the world's most powerful light cruiser, will be placed in service April 4 at the Philadelphia Naval Base.

U. S. Rent Bill Passed; D. C.'s Brought in Line

member. Opposed were 48 Democrats and 95 Republicans.

Chief target of attack in both houses was the conference-devised provision, drafted by Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.), allowing landlords "a fair net operating income."

The measure leaves it to Rent Administrator Tighe E. Woods to determine in each case what such "a fair net operating income" should be.

Senator John Sparkman, credited by his colleagues with much of the success in breaking the Senate-House deadlock over two varying bills, said the provision will operate much like the hardship provision in the present law which allows the Rent Control Administration to raise ceilings where the landlord shows cause.

Bricker charged the "fair net operating income" clause was meaningless, offered no more relief to landlords than the present law, and "leaves it wide open for the expediter to make whatever rules he wishes."

On the House side, Representative Paul Brown (D., Ga.), author of the House-passed amendment guaranteeing landlords "reasonable return on a reasonable value," fought bitterly against the conference report.

"A fair net operating income doesn't mean a thing," the Georgian angrily told the House.

Asserting, "I have done as much work as any two men in the House," Brown vainly appealed to his colleagues to reject the compromise.

House Majority Leader John McCormack (D., Mass.) urged passage on the ground that rejection of the conference report would mean the end of rent control.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) sounded the same note of warning in the Senate.

Status Quo in Large Cities

The "home-rule" provisions of the bill will not be evoked by any large cities, Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors predicted yesterday.

"No major American city will act to end rent controls," Betters said. "As a matter of fact," he added, "many of the important cities, if they had the necessary legal power would undoubtedly strengthen present controls."

In addition to the more disputed clauses the bill would:

1. Permit the Rent Control Administrator to draw up whatever regulations he considers necessary on evictions. The present law leaves it to local authorities. In debate, proponents of the strengthened Federal provisions aid this would prevent mass eviction of tenants.

Administrator May Sue

2. The Rent-Control Administrator is authorized to sue landlords for three times the amount of any charge made against a tenant above the legal rent ceiling. Only tenants now have the power to institute such suits and few have used it. The Rent Administration says they fear reprisals if they do.

3. The new act does not authorize further 15-per-cent "voluntary" increases in rent, and recontrols any dwellings decontrolled under such voluntary levels at the rent figure contained in present leases.

4. Veterans priorities for the first chance to rent or buy a new property are continued.

May Recontrol Areas

5. The Rent-Control Administrator is authorized to recontrol any areas he decontrols after March 31. Woods said this would enable him to decontrol more than 100 out of 600 areas since he would have the power to slap controls back if rents jumped unreasonably.

6. Trailer camps used as permanent homes would be recontrolled. Permanent units of nontransient hotels in New York and Chicago would also be controled.

7. The rent administrator can lift controls from any dwelling he rates as "luxury" housing, providing that by so doing he would encourage splitting larger apartments into more than one smaller one.

Criminal Penalty Cut Stressed

McGrath, who argued on the floor against any changes "in what has proved an excellently administered District rent bill," said elimination of criminal penalties was the "most important" revision.

"Since we agreed to drop criminal penalties from the national bill," said McGrath, "I could not in clear conscience urge greater protection for Washington residents." He said only 15 of nearly 100,000 cases have been prosecuted under the criminal section in the history of the local act.

Civil proceedings whereby a tenant may collect double damages on rental overcharges on application to Municipal Court would remain in effect, McGrath said.

Since all housing constructed after March 31, 1948, is decontrolled, Cogswell said absente of criminal penalties will be "particularly felt" on houses rented for the first time after the amended bill takes effect.

Thinks D. C. Will Fare Well

"Without criminal penalties," said Cogswell, "the law will have no real teeth to compel landlords to establish fair first rentals."

McGrath said he thought the District would fare far better than other cities under the "vague" fair net operating income formula for rent increases because Cogswell always has "adequately adjusted" rents on the basis of higher taxes and operating costs.

The Senate rejected an amendment by Senator George Aiken (R., Vt.) which would protect a sick person from eviction until suitable quarters were found. Aiken said he offered the amendment to cover a particular case here, which he was trying to help.

The Senate appointed McGrath, McCarthy and Senator J. Allen Frear, jr., as conferees. The House will name its conferees today.

COMMENT: Washington's "Little Wall Street" was cheered by the reduction in margin requirements, effective today. Typical comment: "It's about time." Most brokers feel that the new 50 per cent margin will provide a shot in the arm to sluggish trading and should broaden markets by enlarging buying power.

ODD LOTS: Business failures in week ended March 24 dropped to 166 from 210 in previous week, Dun & Bradstreet reports . . . President George J. Hanks of South Penn Oil Co. declared yesterday that overproduction in his field is now similar to that of the prewar period . . . Hart, Schaffner & Marx sales in first quarter of fiscal year ended February 28, increased but profits declined about 25 per cent . . . North American Philips Co. yesterday announced a television set that projects its picture on a home movie screen or even a wall . . . Howard E. Thompson and Edward L. McAleer will attend the forthcoming conference of the southeastern group of the U. S. Savings & Loan League at Old Point Comfort, Va., as official delegates of the D. C. Building & Loan League.

KAISER CUTS: Extent of the price cuts by Kaiser-Frazer was listed yesterday by Ed Bohl, vice president of Washington Motor Sales Corp., distributor for K-F cars in the Washington area. Greatest reduction will come in the Kaiser-Frazer Special, which will drop $330 to retail at $1995. Other price cuts include $316 for the Virginian, $314 for the de luxe, $261 for the Manhattan, $198 for the Frazer and $106 for taxicabs.

EARNINGS: Republic Steel Corp. reported net income of $46,438,382 or $7.61 a common share for 1948, compared with $31,018,410 or $5.17 a share in 1947. Other earnings statements:

List Up 1 to 4 As Margin Cut Spurs Buying

New York, March 29 (AP).—People rushed to buy stocks today following news of more liberal credit terms for the purchase of securities.

Individual stocks shot ahead 1 to an extreme 4 points, many to top prices for the year or more.

The general level of prices rose in one of the sharpest advances of the past year. Only three times since March, 1948, has the market taken so large a stride ahead.

Turnover boomed to 1,800,000 shares, a high since 2,100,000 shares changed hands on November 10. On that date the market was pounded down in the wake of the surprise Truman victory in the national elections.

Brokerage houses reported that orders streamed in from all parts of the Nation. Accounts long dormant, they said, suddenly came to life as their owners put in orders to buy.

Late Monday the Federal Reserve Board announced that margin requirements would be cut tomorrow, Wednesday, to 50 per cent from the 75 per cent which has been in effect for the past two years.

Many brokers described the rush to buy as primarily a psychological reaction to a favorable development. Whatever the ultimate effect of the margin cut, the financial district hailed the decision of the Reserve Board as the victorious climax to a long struggle for lower margin requirements. For months Wall Street, from Emil Schram, exchange president, down the line, has claimed that the stock market was the one truly deflated sector of the economy.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced a full point to 64.3, the highest level since February 4. In the past year this advance has been topped only twice and equaled twice.

New highs for the year were hit during the day by, among others, Western Union, DuPont, Douglas Aircraft, Loew's, Montgomery Ward, Pepsi-Cola, Eastern Air Lines, Lockheed, and Pan American Airways.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Grain prices worked lower in today's Board of Trade session, with the exception of rye which closed higher in a thin market.

Corn held fairly steady during most of the session, but weakened with wheat toward the finish.

At the close wheat was ¾ to 2 cents lower, corn was unchanged to ⅝ lower, oats were ⅛ to ⅜ lower, rye was 1¾ to 2 cents higher, soybeans were unchanged to ¾ lower and lard was 10 to 13 cents a hundredweight lower.

There wasn't much action in any of the pits. Wheat recovered from a low point when it was announced that the Government's buying price was increased ½ cent at Kansas City. However, this news was offset by reports of good rains where needed in the Southwest.

New York Cotton

New York, March 29 (AP).—Cotton futures again experienced a dull session today in mixed trading. Final prices were 45 cents a bale lower to 20 cents higher, with nearby May futures showing independent strength on mill buying and local covering. Some buying was attracted to May delivery on the theory that it will reflect the full impact of larger export business after Congress has voted additional funds to the ECA.

C. & O. Income Drops Despite Record Gross

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. yesterday reported record operating revenue of $334,555,157 for 1948, an increase of 6.9 per cent over the $312,953,036 in 1947.

Net income in 1948 was $29,791,435, equal to $3.72 a common share, compared with net income of $35,387,327 or $4.44 a common share the previous year.

Reducing 1948 net profits was a $6,554,100 charge for Federal back taxes for 1939 to 1945.

In 1948, the C. & O. originated coal loadings of 72,600,000 tons, 12.22 per cent of the Nation's production and more coal than originated by any other railroad. However, coal loadings were down 6.5 per cent from 1947, when the greatest coal tonnage in the company's history was handled.

Merchandise freight loadings amounted to 38,473,650 tons in 1948, a decrease of 5.4 per cent from the previous year.

American Airlines reported operating results for 1948 showed a substantial improvement over 1947. The company had a net loss of $2,894,000 last year, compared with an adjusted loss of $3,401,000 in 1947. However, before a "carry-back" tax refund of $3,025,000, the 1947 loss was $6,426,000. There was no tax refund in 1948.

The principal losses last year occurred in the first quarter when losses amounted to $4,285,000. Operations for each of the last three quarters were conducted at a profit.

Revenues totaled $89,286,000, highest in the company's history and 9.2 per cent over 1947 revenues.

PUC Told PEPCO Rates No Hike Now

An increase in Potomac Electric Power Co. rates is not justified at this time, the District Public Utilities Commission was informed yesterday.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC executive accountant and auditor, in recommending transfer of $61,963 to the deferred credit account of the firm, noted that although the company could seek a rate boost under the sliding scale plan, he did not feel such action would be proper.

The reason, he explained, was that the 1948 revenue report reflected only five months' returns under the rate boost made effective July 21, 1948.

The company's report showed an operating income of $4,937,308, a return of 4.86 per cent on the rate base. This was $651,547 short of the 5½ per cent basic return authorized by the PUC.

Economists Far Apart

Keyserling began his career as a lawyer, feel the council—if it is to be effective—must play a political role. Clark became a vice president of Standard Oil of Indiana and later dean of the College of Business Administration of the University of Nebraska.

NOURSE HIGHLIGHTED the rift when, early in February, he received an invitation from Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate-House Joint Committee on the Economic Report, to testify on the President's anti-inflation program. He was out of the city. After Keyserling had testified Nourse wrote O'Mahoney as follows:

"I understand that Mr. Keyserling and Mr. Clark freely and gladly accepted your invitation to appear before the committee. If I had been here, I would have had, in good conscience, to ask that I be excused.

"I think you are aware that I have always taken the position that the council occupies a unique role of intimate and essentially confidential professional service to the President. It is my belief that this agency cannot, over the years, discharge this function effectively and without embarrassment either to the Chief Executive or to the council members if it is drawn out of the executive office into the political atmosphere of the Hill to discuss specific issues of policy on which the President has made his own recommendations."

CLARK HAS indicated that Nourse's policy would condemn the council to impotence and inaction. He and Keyserling feel that the council should:

1. Undertake economic studies,
2. Translate these studies into recommendations to the President,
3. See that the recommendations are put into effect—that is, are explained and defended before Congress.

Nourse contends that the council's job stops when it makes its reports to the President. He feels the political risks of going beyond that are too great. As he put it in his letter to Senator O'Mahoney:

"It is clearly foreseeable that the council or individual members of the council sooner or later will be in quite frank disagreement with some policy recommended by the President. We would then be confronted by a difficult and dangerous dilemma. Either we would have to 'go down the party line,' supporting this position by the most plausible arguments we could devise, regardless of our honest professional beliefs, or else we would have to debate and in the end criticize positions taken by the President.

"I would be much disturbed, here in the latter years of my professional career, to be put in the position which would be created by the first line of action."

ELECTION POLITICS precipitated the crisis within the council. The President reiterated his plan for standby rationing controls at the Democratic convention last July. He called a special session of Congress to enact it. When the Eightieth Congress refused to comply, he campaigned on the issue. Truman was committed. But the council wasn't.

Nourse had never gone along with the idea of standby price and rationing controls in peacetime. He felt the public wouldn't accept them. When, back in 1947, he was asked by Averell Harriman, then Secretary of Commerce, to be a witness supporting the President's earlier anti-inflation plan, he asked to be excused—first, on the general principle that the council is nonpolitical, second, on the practical ground that if asked if he felt such controls were desirable he would have to say no.

This year, Nourse felt even more strongly. Conditions had changed. The cost of living was declining. Agricultural prices had taken a spill in January and early February, the gray market in steel was subsiding, layoffs were increasing.

BOTH KEYSERLING and Clark, in supporting the President's program, had to emphasize the inflationary forces. Otherwise, they could not—logically—ask for price controls. True, they both said that some prices were going down—but the general impression they left was that inflation was still the dominant danger in the economy. Since then further price cuts and layoffs and another drop in the cost-of-living index have weakened that position. And Nourse, himself, has come out into open conflict with his colleagues.

Following a conference with the President on February 18, he told reporters that we are in a period of "healthy disinflation," by which he meant that inflationary pressures were subsiding.

As a result of the conflict, the council has lost caste in Washington. On Capitol Hill, for instance, Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), who originally felt it was Nourse's duty to testify before Congress—so as to give the lawmakers the benefit of the council's judgment—now has changed his mind. He thinks Nourse was "wise to keep quiet."

How the President resolves the conflict will determine—in large part—the future vitality and usefulness not only of the council but also of the entire Employment Act of 1946.

Train Bandit Recovers

The Washington Post

APPEARS AT HEARING—Luman C. Ramsdell, 23, one of two men charged with robbing a B. & O. train at Martinsburg, W. Va., March 9, waived formal extradition at a hearing before the United States Commissioner here yesterday and agreed to go to Fairmont, W. Va., for trial. He is recovering from a bullet wound suffered when he was captured, and he walked with a limp

English Locomotive Sinks Under Engineer

Wittersham, England, March 29 (AP).—"My locomotive has sunk."

That was the report sent by an engineer to the head men at the Kent and East Sussex Railway, and he wasn't kidding.

The engine and one empty coach ran off the tracks and into a bog. Salvage crews tried—and gave the locomotive up for lost.

Youth Blames Drugs, Drinks In Robbery of B. & O. Train

Twenty-year-old George L. Ashton, one of two youths charged with holding up a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train March 9, pleaded guilty in Federal Court in Fairmont, W. Va., yesterday, blaming the robbery on drugs and drink.

Meanwhile, the other youth, Luman C. Ramsdell, 23, who has been recovering in Gallinger Hospital from a stomach wound suffered when shot by police when arrested, waived extradition here and was ordered removed to Fairmont.

Ashton's sentence was deferred by Federal District Judge Harry E. Watkins in Fairmont pending an investigation by probation officials. He faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and $10,000 fine.

The youths were indicted for holding up the B and O's crack express, the Ambassador, near Martinsburg, W. Va., and robbing its passengers, crew and dining car. They were captured the day after the robbery in a pawnshop in the 2100 block of Pennsylvania ave. nw., here. The court heard a statement by Ashton's attorney in which the defendant said he had been drinking and taking benzedrine before boarding the train. Ashton, in the statement, denied he struck any passengers with a pistol butt, as reported by witnesses.

At the hearing here before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence for the other defendant, Ramsdell appeared pale and walked with a limp. In Fairmont, he will face a Federal anti-racketeering charge, since he has indicated he will plead guilty to that charge rather than face a stiffer West Virginia law.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz dropped a charge of armed train robbery yesterday when he signed the extradition waiver.

In fixing Ramsdell's bail at $50,000, Commissioner Lawrence recommended he be hospitalized on reaching Fairmont. He will be held in the District Jail infirmary here until his transfer.

Ramsdell's mother, Mrs. Caroline Ramsdell of Youngstown, Ohio, was present at yesterday's hearing but took no part in the hearing. William S. Culbertson, Washington attorney, represented the youth.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE
on the supply of fuel oil for home heating

THERE IS NO SHORTAGE AND NO PROSPECT OF SHORTAGE OF HOME HEATING FUEL OILS. When the war ended, the demand for fuel oil and petroleum products of all kinds grew so rapidly that the oil industry entered into the greatest expansion program in its entire history.

Even during the severe winter of 1947-48, less than one per cent of the millions of oil heat users were short of oil at any given time. And in the Washington area, we are proud to say, the percentage was even lower.

In response to inquiries concerning the future supply of oil for home and commercial heating, we want to point out that the full effect of the industry's expansion program can now be felt everywhere, and the continued outlook for plenty of fuel oil is better than ever.

New refineries have been constructed; new tankers and pipe-lines have been built; more and deeper oil wells have been drilled; research facilities have been expanded. This program cost the industry billions of dollars, but it produced the oil needed for home heating and other purposes. In fact, during 1948 the industry produced 90 billion gallons of petroleum products—an all-time record for total products as well as for home heating oils.

As for supplies in the years to come, right now the country's reserves of recoverable oil in developed fields—known to oilmen as "proved reserves"—are the highest in history. A report just released by the American Petroleum Institute shows that on January 1, 1949, proved reserves including crude oil and natural gasoline liquids amounted to 26 billion barrels, or more than a trillion gallons in the ground for future use.

There is plenty of oil in the United States yet to be discovered, and as new oil is found, the reserves (less current consumption) are increased by that amount. For example, at the end of World War I, the known oil reserves were only 6 billion barrels. Yet, since that time, discoveries have amounted to more than 50 billion barrels.

If you heat with oil, or are planning to install new oil heating equipment, you can look forward with complete assurance to more than adequate supplies of fuel oil for many, many years to come. Oil is first choice for home heating, and that's another reason why the oil industry is making sure you have a plentiful supply.

One on the Aisle—

Unsettling Film Made in Berlin

By Richard L. Coe

FROM POSTWAR GERMANY comes a film about life under Hitler. The story of a theatrical marriage—based on a true case—"Marriage in the Shadows," opens this morning at the Little.

It is a brooding, provocative picture, well made despite the technical deficiencies of its filming. In the central role Ilse Steppat is commanding and sincere, and the English subtitles are adequate to your understanding of the story.

Yet, does the fact that this film has been made, that it presumably is being shown in Germany, mean anything? For all its sense of ghastly reality, its natural settings, its outspoken attitude, there is a bitterly unreal air about it. It seems purposely to have avoided the passion it might have had, but in its very avoidance it has a curiously bloodless frame. It is as if the German people who made the film (in the Russian zone of Berlin) are looking at people other than themselves, disowning as it were the fleshless bones that once were their framework.

It is as if they are saying, "This story we are telling you happened somewhere else, to other kinds of people. The gradual compromises that led to the final tragedy were not of our making. We wash our hands of them." It is a lesson, spoken, not understood.

"MARRIAGE IN THE SHADOWS." (Ehe im Schatten). Produced by D. E. F. A. Screen play and direction by Kurt Maetzig. Photographed by Friedel Bhon-Grund. Music by Wolfgang Zeller. At the Little.

THE CAST

Elizabeth Maurer	Ilse Steppat
Kurt Bernstein	Alfred Balthoff
Dr. Silverman	Willi Prager
Hans Weiland	Paul Klinger
Dr. Blohm	Claus Holm
Propaganda Minister	L. Firmans

The story tells of a theatrical couple who seem to be on the way toward national respect. She parries his offers of marriage, for she is liked by others and life seems full of promise. But the rise of Hitler brings on the laws against Jews, and she is a Jew. When her onetime costar sticks by her, she realizes that he truly loves her and they are married, she retiring from the stage, he becoming the breadwinner.

Based on Actual Facts

Gradually the pressure against the Jews continues, those ever-narrowing regulations against any who have the slightest strain of Jewish blood in their veins. When the husband returns from his part in the war (1943), he is given permission to act, but at a public meeting between his wife and a Nazi bigshot, the latter is "tainted" by having kissed her hand publicly. The actor's career must end, the wife must be divorced and sent to the gas chambers. Rather than submit, the two commit suicide.

This is based on the all too true lives of Joachim and Meta Gottschalk, a well-loved pair in Germany who did away with themselves and their 8-year-old son after just such an incident involving Goebbels.

Now what makes this real yet unreal is the ghastly fact that such a thing could have happened at all. How can one ever explain that a nation allowed this thing, how can one ever understand that the people who present to you this charade lived through the incident themselves? Where does this end, you think, hearing the film's chilling reference to attacks on Communists? Where, indeed, does any human attack against other human beings begin; where does it end?

The record, which "Marriage in the Shadows" follows carefully, is there for all to see. It is a bitter, shameful record, yet it is viewed with a lack of passion and remorse that is strangely unsettling.

No, "Marriage in the Shadows" is not a pleasant picture, but it is a disturbingly provocative one.

YESTERDAY'S column, stated that the Amherst College Masquers' production at Folger Library would be reviewed in this space today, but if you read your paper thoroughly yesterday, you know this reporter's story appeared in the news columns . . . Yes, the Masquers did splendidly by "Julius Caesar" and the Elizabethan playhouse makes a fascinating setting, luxurious for all its mock primitive quality . . . The lighting and technical direction of Ralph C. McGoun is particularly commendable . . . And the leads are exceptionally fine . . . It seems a shame to limit praise to any individuals in the large visiting group, but I must include again James Maxwell's fine Brutus, Donald Roberts' exceptional Cassius, Peter Klaussen's Casca and Raymond MacDonnell's Marcus Antonius . . . And to the library's director, Louis B. Wright, congratulations for having put his fascinating stage to use . . . He promises further offerings in the future.

Big Audience Greets Return of Heifetz

By Paul Hume

Jascha Heifetz returned to Constitution Hall last night after a year's vacation from all concert stages.

He was greeted by an audience that nearly packed the place and one that shouted for him in the usual way. His vacation may have helped him greatly, but it was a long period of waiting for his faithful followers.

As for his playing, who can say that it is better than before? Heifetz has always been at that peak of perfection in technique that baffles all analysis. To hear him open his program last night with the E Major Partita of Bach was to hear some of the world's greatest playing.

Every time these solo works are played one wonders how an arranger has the nerve to transcribe them for full orchestra. Heifetz made every line of the partita clear. Involved counterpoint was no less explicit than the simplicity of minuets and other dances. It was superb playing.

The rest of the program was far lighter in texture. A Saint-Saens sonata rarely rose above the salon stage except in an exciting finale. It was in this last movement that Emanuel Bay, so discreet an accompanist, got in and added to the real thrill of the music.

A suite by Christian Sinding, known chiefly as the composer of "Rustles of Spring", surprised plenty of people. No great achieve? ment, in its imitation of baroque style it is engaging enough for a place on more pograms than it reaches. Its slow movement was sustained elegance and beauty.

The final group, often four or five trivial affairs, was enriched by relatively unfamiliar items of Dohnanyi, Turina, Szymanowski, and Fritz Kreisler. The first three were notable pages, from works we would like to know better. Heifetz and Bay were lauded vociferously at the close of the program.

Dr. Miles Hits Aid to Schools

Federal aid for education is "unwise and unnecessary," Dr. John A. Miles, director of research for the education committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Civitan Club.

"It is most unfortunate that the teaching profession has been sold the idea that Federal aid will solve all their problems," Dr. Miles said.

He declared additional expenditures for schools should come from State and local tax sources rather than from the Federal Government. States and communities can afford to spend more money if they equalize their taxes, Miles said.

There are "wide variations in the tax base for support of schools," he said, "some S using 10 or 12 sources, others still relying on one or two."

Schools to Be Topic Of Burroughs Citizens

A panel discussion of "School Needs and How to Meet Them" will be sponsored by the Burroughs Citizens Association tonight at 9 p. m. in Taft Junior High School, 18th and Perry sts. nw.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Nat Karson, the producer and scenic-designer, will fly to Denmark soon to assist in the production of "Hamlet." This is the annual Shakespearian presentation, in the palace grounds at Elsinore, where the tragedy originally took place. Karson's job will be to light the show . . . "You're going to have a tough lighting problem," said Paul Stewart. "It's set outdoors, in the evening, and it doesn't get dark till late, in Scandinavia" . . . "I'll light that show," Karson vowed, "if I have to send for 10,000 dark glasses."

Despite the fact that "Body and Soul," the movie which starred John Garfield, was a successful and well-publicized film last year, MGM has announced plans to produce a movie to be called "Bodies and Souls" . . . "Starring," was the suggestion, "John Garfields."

One of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's friends tells of the day, shortly after his marriage when his bride accompanied him to the race-track and bet $30 on a Vanderbilt-bred horse, which lost . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt then approached Jerry Brady, the race-track man, and said: "I've just lost $30 on the first race." She extended her program and asked: "How do I win back that $30?" . . . Brady pointed to a tattered old man standing nearby. "More than 25 years ago that man lost $30 on a race," he said. "And ever since then, he's been trying to win it back."

Foreign Minister Vishinsky of Russia clashed with Philippine Ambassador Carlos P. Romulo at a U. N. session, at which Romulo described a Soviet resolution on Greece as "cynical and impertinent" . . . "Romulo, representing a tiny nation, makes a lot of noise," said Vishinsky. "He reminds me of the Russian proverb, 'His ambition is worth a ruble, but his ammunition is only worth a cent' " . . . "To the blustering Goliath I say that we, the little Davids here, will fling our pebbles of truth where it hurts most," replied Romulo. "And, incidentally, with the present rate of exchange, the cent may be worth more than the ruble."

John Gunther managed to obtain an invitation to see the priceless art collection of Dr. Albert Barnes, the argyrole king. Gunther went to Barnes' museum with some friends, and when he arrived he saw his host with a group of young students. "Ah, here's John Gunther," Dr. Barnes announced. "He will now lecture to you on world affairs."

Md. Senate Rejects GOP School Plan

Annapolis, Md., March 29 (AP).—Republicans tried to put across their own plan of State aid for county school construction today, but were promptly and emphatically turned down.

Senate Minority Leader Kimble (R., Allegany), offered the Republican program, which fell before virtually solid Democratic opposition.

It would have increased from $50,000,000 to $85,000,000 a proposed State "credit pool" for school building loans in Baltimore City and the 23 counties.

Senate Backs Lane Plan

Governor Lane had fixed the $50,000,000 figure on the "pool," which is merely to lend State credit to counties so they can get along with construction programs.

After debate ended, the Senate gave tentative approval to Lane's plan.

Kimble also wanted to multiply by four times the amount the State contributes to the school building incentive fund. The administration has opposed this idea from the first.

The Republican program would have been financed by a secret arrangement which would "more than provide" the money necessary. The "secret" did not come out because the Senate refused to approve the Republican formula.

Democrat Breaks Party Line

On a test vote, the Senate killed Kimble's program by a 17-12 vote. Senator Guy Johnson (D., Cecil) voted for it. Otherwise, Democrats were all against, Republicans solidly for.

Other business of the day:

1. Governor Lane withdrew a plan to allow negotiation of bridge contracts without receiving formal bids. This had been projected because of high figures offered for the Chesapeake Bay bridge.

2. Tentative house approval was given to reorganization of the board of natural resources, and to creation of a Chesapeake-Potomac Authority to settle maritime problems of Virginia and Maryland. Final votes on these will come later.

3. The House turned down any laws covering roadside control. County delegates, aided by a few city members, voted against a bill to allow the roads commission to regulate hotdog stands and taverns 100 feet on either side of new main highways.

House Amends Slot Machine Bill in County

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 29.—Several amendments were added to the Prince Georges County slot machine bill today as the measure neared final passage in the House of Delegates.

Left intact were provisions that would authorize a countywide special election on whether slot machines—other than "one armed bandits," which pay off in cash—should be legalized

Supporters of the gambling advices estimate they would net the county an additional $14,000 annually in license fees.

Tacked on today were amendments to lower the license fee for each machine which paysoff in cash from $200 to $175 and increase the number of such machines that could be owned by a distributor from 75 to 100.

Prince Georges legislators sponsoring tht referendum measure say the only opposition to date has come from a colleague, House Majority Leader Leroy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges).

Pumphrey, in announcing his opposition, described the machines as "the most vicious form of all gambling."

An amendment to another Prince Georges County measure, upping from $5000 to $6000 the proposed salary for a full-time chairman of the board of county commissioners, was approved.

Montgomery County would have clear authority to adopt an ordinance regulating taxicabs, particularly rates under terms of a bill which saw final passage today and was sent to the Governor.

Following adoption of such an ordinance last year by the county commissioners, Robert H. Swisher, Takoma Park cab operator, contested the law in county circuit court. His contention that the State law under which it was adopted was unconstitutional was upheld in a preliminary court opinion.

Meanwhile, prospects for revival of the controversy over whether the University of Maryland should submit detailed budgets dimmed today.

Delegate Jerome Robinson (D., Baltimore), announced he would not take the initiative in petitioning from committee his bill which would require all State departments, including the university, to submit itemized budgets to the legislature for study and approval.

Several other delegates queried said they would not take action to bring the bill out if the sponsor declined to do so.

Money Problem

Farmers Ask County Help For Roads

The Montgomery County Council yesterday was urged to untangle a $700,000 snarl currently blocking increased rural road improvement.

The money was authorized in bond issue form in 1946 as part of a $5 million "get-the-farmer-out-of-the-mud" program.

With part of the program completed, spokesmen for the farmers told the councilmen yesterday that there is a legal question whether the $700,000 authorization is still good in view of the time lapse and suggested that the matter be determined one way or another. The council was urged to consider other means of providing the funds if the bond proposition is no longer valid.

Appearing for the farmers was a delegation from the Montgomery County Farm Bureau headed by James D. King, farm bureau president, and O. W. Anderson, county farm agent.

At one point, Council President Frederic P. Lee asked the spokesmen if the farmers would agree to a 1¾-cent rise in their real estate tax rate to provide the funds.

King and Anderson indicated they were not authorized to discuss that question.

Prince Georges Discloses Proposed Budget of $4,351,237 for 1949-50

With all monetary requests trimmed except that of the school board, the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday made public a tentative 1949-50 budget of $4,351,237.

The proposed budget would jump the county tax levy from $1.97 to $2.24 for each $100 assessed valuation.

The record $2,333,638 asked from the county to operate schools through fiscal 1949 accounts for 24½ cents of the 27-cent proposed rate boost, Linden Briscoe, clerk to the commissioners, said.

Briscoe said, however, the school request has not yet been studied by the county heads, and might yet be cut. Most of the other budget requests, he pointed out, were slashed back to about the same figures as last year.

A public hearing on the tentative over-all budget will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday in the commissioner's hearing room at the county courthouse in Upper Marlboro.

Following it, Briscoe said, the commissioners will study the budget further before final action, which is expected, he said, by April 14.

The proposed $4,351,237 budget is $1,280,959 more than the county's current $3,070,278 budget. A total of $631,966 from surplus funds, however, was added to the current budget to give the county $3,702,244 with which to operate through June 30.

The county this year has no surplus to supplement its budget.

Briscoe pointed out the proposed budget contains no provision for paying interest and setting up a sinking fund for a proposed $10,650,000 county school bond issue, the authorization for which passed second reading in the Maryland General Assembly yesterday.

The proposed budget cuts the Prince Georges General Hospital $50,235 request to $30,000, the amount it received last year, and trims the county's road construction allocation to $136,188 by slashing from 10 to 7 cents the rate for such on each $100 assessed valuation. For road maintenance, the present 10-cent rate is retained, for an expected yield of $194,554.

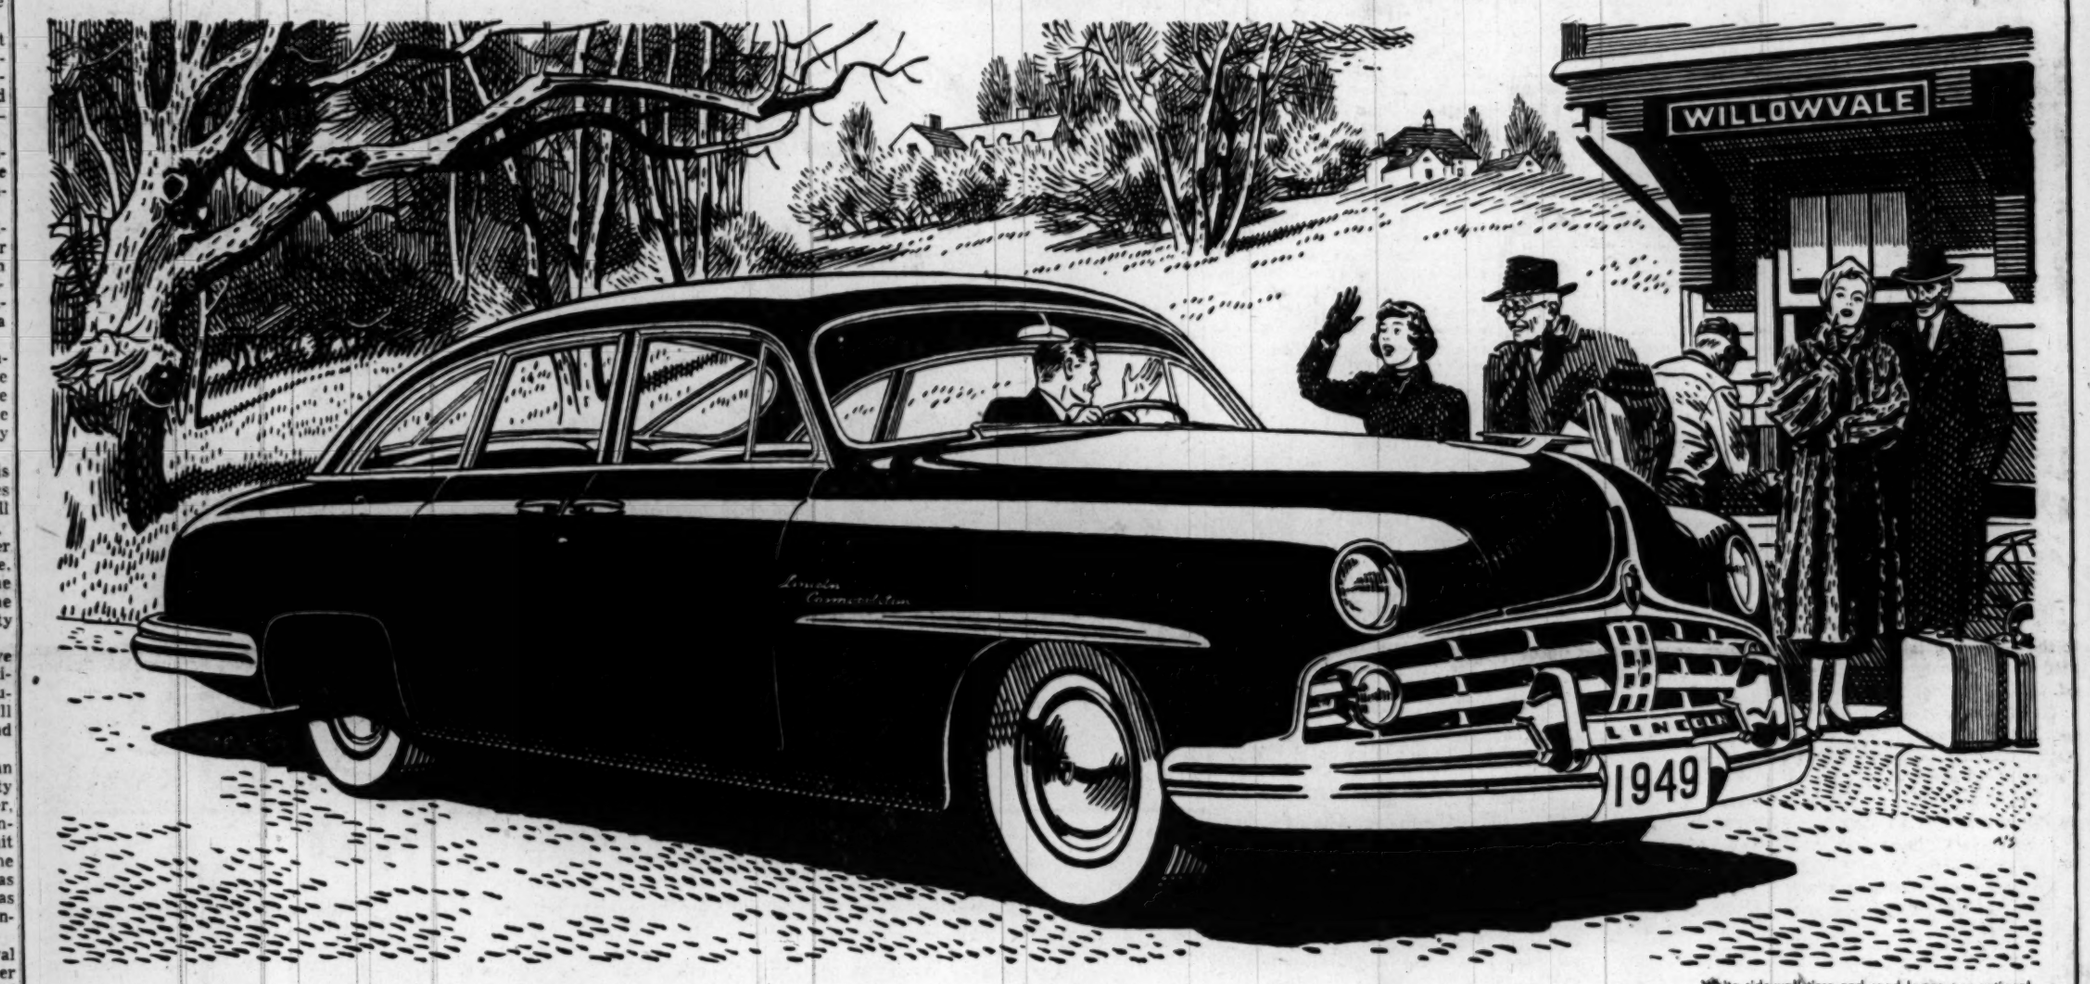

Briscoe also announced these additional taxes will be levied in special areas:

State tax, 11 and 15/100 cents per $100 (current is 11 and 13/100); Sanitary tax, 10 cents per $100—no change; Park and Planning tax, 8 cents in the Metropolitan district and 3 cents in the regional district (current is a straight 5 cents per $100) and a Metropolitan Area tax at from 7½ cents to 8 cents per $100 (current is 4 and 2/5 cents).

Caps Outlast Knicks, 77-71, in Semifinal Opener

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

LAKELAND, FLA., MARCH 29.—Within earshot of any of the big league training camps in Florida, you hear the same complaints from managers, scouts and club presidents —there aren't enough good ball players.

Even the Brooklyn Dodgers, who are processing 670 players through their Vero Beach camp, can't turn up enough good ones. Presently they are using a catcher, Gil Hodges, as their No. 1 first baseman.

POVICH

The rich Detroit Tigers can't buy or breed a second baseman, and they have expressed a willingness to spend as much as $200,000 for such an item. The Red Sox, who could walk home with pitching, can't find pitchers. The Yankees own 20 farm clubs and have 25 scouts operating, but can't dig up an acceptable first baseman.

It's no new situation. The caliber of baseball started slumping with the outset of the war and as late as last year the war was a handy whipping boy for the lack of talent. But the war has been over four years now, and the ebb of good baseball is still here.

MR. WISH EGAN, who as the top scout of Walter O. Briggs' Detroit Tigers, is armed with the fattest checkbook and deadliest fountain pen of any man in the business, confesses the sorriness of his situation. For four years now he has been commissioned to buy or sign a second baseman for Detroit, and he is no closer to the object of his search than he was in 1945.

Up until last year, Egan, like most of the others, blamed the war for the scarcity of talent, but he is changing his tune. "It's the fault of baseball as much as the war," Egan now says. "Our people have let other sports like football and tennis and golf steal the intrest of our kids. I remember when every kid wanted to play baseball."

Football has made the greatest inroads, Egan asserts. "The best organization in the world is that of college football," he says. "They have a bigger chain store system than baseball. They work through the high school coaches, and if a boy shows signs of football ability in high school, they keep him out of baseball. They're all puffed up with the honor and glory of playing college football."

THE MAJOR LEAGUES appropriate $50,000 every year to finance the American Legion junior baseball program, and that is well, but only as far as it goes, says Egan. "They used up virtually all of the $50,000 transporting their teams to the regional and national playoffs, none of it for purchase of equipment that would attract the boys to the game."

Organized baseball is missing the bus with its heedlessness of the lack of interest by young America, says Egan. "We can't provide diamonds and equipment for every boy in the country, but we could excite their interest in some other ways," he says.

"We're not making use of our own resources. Every year dozens of our big league ballplayers pass out of the game because of age or other reasons. They go back to their home towns and try to make a living. We ought to set them up as coaches and develop baseball programs for their hometown kids. After all, a fellow who has been in the big leagues ought to be a bit of a hero with them. It wouldn't take much to pay their modest salaries, and it would be our best investment in the game's future."

THE MAJOR LEAGUE CLUBS are learning that the baseball schools they have been setting up in Florida are not the answer to the scarcity of talent. There hasn't been enough talent uncovered in the schools to make the program worth while, every honest club will admit.

Sid Hudson, who was an instructor in the Nats' schools at Cocoa and Winter Garden, Fla., declared he didn't see a single ballplayer with any prospects of being better than a B-leaguer. "At the end of the semester, 90 per cent of them went home, admitting they had just come to Florida as a lark and for a vacation.

"They weren't taking their baseball seriously. And they weren't good ballplayers. In my little home town of Olive Springs, Tenn., there were a dozen kids on our lots who were better than any of the boys in our baseball school. I don't know what has happened to the good kid ballplayers. If there are any, they're not playing ball."

Nats Have Everything In 7-2 Win Over Tigers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Lakeland, Fla., March 29.—The Nats grew some muscles suddenly, somehow, and clouted the Tigers with a 7-2 defeat today in their greatest swatting demonstration of the year to date.

And they exhibited some downright decent pitching to go along with it, the contribution of Ray Scarborough and Paul Calvert, who confined the Tigers to six hits.

Al Kozar and Clyde Vollmer whacked out lengthy three-baggers —Eddie Robinson and Eddie Stewart belted doubles. There were various other safe blows by the Nats to the total of 13.

The surprising figure of the ball game was the bespectacled Calvert, who projected himself into line for more serious assignments on the Washington pitching staff. The French-Canadian followed Scarborough to the mound at the start of the sixth and pitched four innings of hitless, runless ball.

Gray Manhandled

Ted Gray, who is supposed to be one of the more promising pitching rookies of the Tigers, took the brunt of the Nats' assault. They swatted him for 9 of the 13 hits and 6 of their runs in the first 3 innings.

Scarborough had only one rough inning, the second, in which he gave up both Detroit runs. In no other inning did he permit a Tiger past second base.

Calvert had to pitch himself out of trouble of his own making in the ninth, however, when the Tigers filled the bases with one out, without the aid of a hit. When Calvert was attending strictly to his pitching he was superb. Defensively, he was not much account. He fumbled a grounder by Evers, and then made a wild throw to second on Groth's tap into the box. A walk to Robinson filled the bases.

Double Play Helps

His sinker pitch pulled Calvert out nicely, though. Berry drilled a ball into the ground and Kozar grabbed it up to start a game-ending double play via Dente and Robinson.

Kozar opened up on Gray with a triple to right in the second inning and Evans promptly scored him with a single to center. The Nats made it four hits in a row when Scarborough singled to center and Coan singled to right, for a 2-0 lead.

The Tigers promptly tied it up on Evers' infield hit, Groth's long double to center and Berry's single, but the Nats stepped four runs in front in the third.

Vollmer commenced that session with a triple to right and it was the first of three Washington hits in a row. Yost singled to left, Robinson doubled to right. Evans walked and Scarborough singled to center. The fourth run of the inning scored when Groth let Scarborough's drive roll through his legs.

NOTES — Scarborough's hitting surpassed his pitching . . . In three times at bat, he drove out as many sharp singles . . . Sam Dente made the play of the day with an unpremediated assist from Al Kozar. Rapp's smash hit Kozar on the shoulder and Dente picked up the ball for a throw and put-out at first base . . . The Tigers were baffled by Calvert's sinker . . . They were beating it into the ground, and the pitcher personally threw out four of the first six men he faced. Gil Coan was hit on the fist by the first pitch of the game, and given his base . . . The Nats were somewhat subdued after Sol Rogovin replaced Gray in the fifth . . . off him they collected only three hits and a ninth-inning run, driven in by Vollmer and Yost . . . The Nats bussed it back to Orlando to meet the Phillies tomorrow at Tinker Field.

My Story . . . By Joe Louis

Joe Makes Schmeling Scream

(Eleventh of 15 instalments)

Louis Flattens Schmeling in First Round

HERE'S where I ought to tell about President Roosevelt and me. "There was a story got around that the President called me down to the White House and said I had beat Schmeling for him. It wasn't like that. I was in Washington at the Negro Elks convention in 1938. I got an honorary life membership gold card in the Elks. The President heard about me being in the Elks parade. He sent his car for me. Mal Frazier, an old friend of mine, went with me.

A man took us into the President's office. The President had me lean over so he could feel my muscles. He said, "Joe, we need muscles like yours to beat Germany." That's the only thing he said, but I figured he knew then we'd be fighting the Germans someday. He got out one of his pictures and put his autograph on it. He wrote, "To Joe Louis from the President." That's all that happened, but it got built up into something different.

When I was training for my second Schmeling fight I got that talk again about he was saying around his camp that the Germans were the superrace and he was going to prove it. The sportswriters brought those stories from his camp to mine. Maybe they just meant it to needle me, but I heard it so many times I knew it was true.

While I was training, those German Bund storm troopers used to sit around the ring and laugh. They had a camp up that way. When we came into New York on fight night, I was ready for Mr. Schmeling. No one was laughing when we drove in, the way they are most of the time. Chappie and Mr. Roxborough knew what this fight meant to me. They didn't try to make it something light.

I TOOK a long warm-up in my dressing room. When I climbed in the ring I was in a light sweat, the way I like to be for a fight. Me and Chappie talked about what I was going to do, and I went out. I knew I was going to take Max Schmeling that night. I came out easy. He tried a right to my head, but it went around me. I left-jabbed him mean and he brought his guard low. I drove a right to his jaw with all I had. I put my body in it. I put my heart in it. It threw him on the ropes and his knees buckled. I caught him coming off the ropes and ripped one into his belly.

HE screamed. I thought in my mind, "How's those, Mr. Superrace?" I was glad he was hurt. That's what I wanted. I got in two more hard rights to his body and a jaw-breaker. He went down for the short count, and I knocked him down again with a left hook and a right cross. When he came up I put him down with another right to the jaw.

One of Schmeling's people threw a towel in the ring, but the referee threw it back and kept counting. Schmeling tried to heave himself up, but he didn't come off the floor.

That was a big night in Harlem and in Detroit and Philadelphia. I read about it in the papers—about parades and people standing in the streets to talk about the fight. I guess that was the biggest hour, bigger almost than getting to be champ. I went out with Marva in Harlem and we had a real party. My pay for the second Schmeling fight was $350,000.

THERE was one thing about that fight that didn't get around. When Schmeling's handlers saw him getting beat they cut off the shortwave radio wires to Berlin. They didn't want the German people to know a Negro was getting the best of a fight with a superman. Later on Schmeling gave out in Germany that I fouled him and that's why he lost.

That's one more reason why I don't like Max Schmeling. The movies show I didn't foul, but they didn't show those fight movies in Germany.

After Schmeling I didn't fight again in 1938. I took to having good times with my winnings. I did the things I wanted. Some say I threw money away, but I don't see it like that. I got a softball team. We called it the Brown Bombers and we toured the States. Mostly the kids were boys from East Detroit. I played first base. We moved around in big buses and ate good and stayed in hotels.

THAT added up fast. When the season ended I was out $50,000. I don't think that was waste. I had my fun. Only thing was Mr. Roxborough was afraid I might get hurt bad and be out of boxing, but I only hurt my ankle. That was out in Pittsburgh. It healed up good.

While I'm talking about where my money went I want to get it over with. I gave a lot to old fighters who were in bad luck, but I don't see anything wrong in that. When a man's got plenty, like I was making it, I think there's something wrong if he don't give some for things like that. I gave some to the Phyllis Wheatley Home for Old Ladies out in Detroit and I give them some every year. When I got out there they would talk about fighting. Mr. Roxborough got them a radio-phonograph and they tuned in every time I was in the ring. They all call me "son." That gives me around 20 mothers. Some of these old ladies run around 90 to 100 years.

I SPENT a lot on fancy clothes when I got big money. That was because I was so raggedy when I was a kid. One time I had around 100 suits made by Billy Taub in New York and MacIntosh in Hollywood. They stood me $150 to $185 apiece, made to order. That's wore off. I don't care about fancy clothes now. I got around 10 suits, and most of my stuff is sports clothes, like for golfing. I gave a lot away.

I spent a lot for big cars, but that's changed too. I don't drive much now, only when it comes over me to be away from everybody. It may be 2, 3 o'clock in the morning. When I get like that I don't

Grant Again Wins AAU Heavy Title

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Defending Champion Eddie Grant, after absorbing a thorough beating, needed just one punch to keep his District AAU heavyweight crown last night as finals in the annual tourney were staged at Turner's Arena.

Grant, of the Apollo Club, was a thoroughly battered champ by the second round of his scrap with Fred Samuelson, tackle of George Washington University's football team. Samuelson was far ahead on points, despite four hours of grid practice in the afternoon, when Grant's one punch landed.

A looping left hook caught Samuelson on the point of his chin and he went down. He was up at eight as the second round bell sounded but Grant was awarded a TKO at 2:58 of the second round.

The tournament's outstanding boxers, according to a selecting committee, were Novice Rev Rucker, a private from Fort McNair, and Senior Willie Davis of the Apollo Club. Rucker earned a split decision over Edwards A C's Tom Hawkins in the 147-pound finals and Davis knocked out Olympic's Dave Robinson in the 135-pound finals.

Davis' selection was made before either Grant's bout or the 112-pound senior final in which classy Gene Smith, fresh from winning the Golden Gloves inter-city title in New York, walked off with the nod over Joe Buttice of Police Boys' Club No. 4.

With the help of Davis and Grant, Apollo won the senior team trophy with 17 points. Second was PBC No. 2 and third was Olympic Club.

The novice team title went to PBC No. 4, winner of two titles, with 15 points. PBC No. 2 had 12 points and Ft. McNair 10.

Sala Offered Bout

Pittsburgh, March 29 (AP).—Middleweight Lee Sala today was offered $10,000 for an outdoor fight in Paris against Laurent Dauthille.

Cerdan Kayoes British Champ

London, March 29 (AP).—World middleweight champion Marcel Cerdan knocked out Britain's Dick Turpin in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round, non-title fight at Empress Hall tonight.

Cerdan weighed 163¼ while the British and Empire 160-pound champion was announced as "inside 162 pounds."

Turpin was doing all right until Cerdan caught him with a terrific right to the body early in the seventh. Marcel then applied the finisher, a short left hook to the jaw.

Turpin was out cold and had to be carried to his corner. He quickly recovered, however.

It was the Frenchman's first fight since he lifted the title from Tony Zale in Jersey City, N. J., last September, and showed the crowd of 7000 that he is as good as ever.

The champion was guaranteed $40,000 for the non-title affair but he had to give back $2000 as a forfeit for being overweight. Under the contract terms he was supposed to weigh 162 or less.

Norlander, Hermsen and Nichols Pace Late Splurge

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

On a strange court against a familiar foe, the Washington Caps were up to their old tricks again last night, playing winning basketball.

The occasion was the first game of the BAA's semifinal playoff series, and the Caps made it an auspicious one, from a Washington point of view by spanking the New York Knickerbockers, 77 to 71.

A shouting crowd of 3787 turned up at the National Guard Armory for the event. The Uline Hot Shots had to desert their ice house court for the Armory plant since Uline's is housing a circus this week.

The series now moves to Madison Square Garden for the second game Thursday. If the Caps can sew it up then, they'll face Minneapolis which last night eliminated Rochester, for the playoff title in a four-out-of seven series beginning next week. If a third New York-Cap game is necessary, it will be played here at the armory.

Jack Nichols, Kleggie Hermsen and Johnny Norlander put the Caps over the hump. Nichols, the 6-foot-7 freshman star from Washington University, and Hermsen, 6-foot-8 veteran, collaborated on a hot scoring splurge late in the last period that beat the Knicks.

Good in Right Spots

Norlander, spot player that he is, chose two spots to get hot. He fought off tht Knicks almost single-handedly in the first quarter and showed up again in the waning moments of the last period to help the locals in their successful effort to ward off the pressing New Yorkers.

Moving into the pivot post while Hermsen worked under the boards, Nichols bagged 8 of his 14 points in the last six minutes of the contest. His scoring sortie took place when the Knicks were only 3 points behind, but when Nichols got through they were 7 points behind and never caught up.

Hermsen, who aided Nichols in tieing up New York's big men under the boards, interrupted Nichols' act long enough to contribute 7 points of his 13 points in the spree which took the Caps from a 62-59 advantage to a 7-point bulge.

He Settles Them Down

With that lead to protect in the last two minutes, Norlander barged into the act by steadying down his teammates against the Knicks who were pressing and fouling in their desperation to gain possession of the ball.

Norlander also emerged as high scorer for the Caps, slipping in five baskets and six free throws, 16 points. The sullen Swede got half of his points in the first quarter, added three more in the third period and tossed in his final five in the last 12-minute period.

Until Nichols came to life, it was a touch-and-go affair in which the score was tied eight times and never more than four points separating the contestants.

Norlander and Sonny Hertzberg, the Caps floor leader, teamed up on a couple of quick baskets to whip up a 21-17 first-quarter lead for Washington. Dick O'Keefe manufactured a 38-35 halftime Washington lead with an eight-point spree shortly before intermission.

The Knicks stayed in the fight most of the second half, owning a one-point lead early in the third quarter when Carl Braun potted a basket for a 47-46 Knick lead. That was quickly rubbed out and the Caps jumped into a three-point command again, but never were able to shake the Knicks off for good until Nichols delivered.

Lakers Win West Playoff

St. Paul, Minn., March 29 (AP).—George Mikan scored 31 points as the Minneapolis Lakers clinched the Western Division playoffs by downing Rochester, 67-55, tonight in the Basketball Association of America. In four playoff tilts Mikan garnered a total of 138 points.

Behind 52-49 at the end of the third period, Minneapolis held Rochester without a field goal in the final period, meanwhile dropping six out of 12 of their own shots.

It was the Lakers' sixth victory in eight games this season with Rochester and qualifies Minneapolis for the final playoff tilt between the winner of the Washington-New York series which started tonight.

The game was played on a neutral St. Paul auditorium floor because facilities were unavailable for it in Minneapolis. A crowd of 10,412 saw the game.

DiMaggio Gets Starting Role in Reds Game Today

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio will be the starting center fielder when the New York Yankees meet the Cincinnati Reds in an exhibition baseball game here tomorrow.

DiMaggio, used only as a pinch hitter so far this spring because of trouble with his right heel, may play only a few innings. Club officials said he would extend his periods of activity gradually from day to day. They expect him to be playing nine innings by mid-April.

In his 11 appearances as a pinch hitter to date, DiMaggio has collected three singles and walked three times.

Sandlot Leagues Will Start Season Weekend of April 23

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE APRIL 23-24 weekend signals the official opening of the District and area sondlot baseball season.

On Saturday, the 23rd, the Boys' Club of Washington's Eastern and Western Divisions, consisting of 50 teams of 800 boys 17 years and under, begin operations.

The next day, the revamped six-team Montgomery County League launches its season. The Potomac Brewers, last year's champions have dropped out of the loop, and are replaced by Damascus, champion of the Tri-State League for the past two seasons.

Most of the other leagues in the area open on the April 30-May 1 weekend. The Washington Post-Industrial League opens with one game on Saturday the 30th. And the City Unlimited Sunday League opens the next day.

Monday, May 2, is opening day for: D. C. Recreation Department's three old leagues, plus a new one; the revived Capital Transit League; and the Departmental League.

The City Junior League, which has expanded from 5 to 15 teams, holds back its opening until June 6, when the high school season will have ended.

MAX COE, who quit as Naiman's Photo manager last year to go to Greece for the State Department, is back as third baseman for Cameo Furniture Co., defending champion of the Industrial League . . . No. 1 threat to Cameo's title is last year's Merchandising Plumbers team, which this year will carry the Thrifty Liquor standard. Last season, the Plumbers won both the Departmental weekday and City Sunday League championships. On the Thrifty team will be such worthies as Joe Murphy, former Georgetown University second baseman, Third Baseman Reds Vernon, former Golden Gloves champion, Bobby Curtiss, McKinley Tech High shortstop, Bobby Leach, former All-High first baseman at Western, and Harry Martin, who caught for Central High seven years ago . . . Jim Castiglia, the Redskins' backfield workhorse, will catch for the Heurich Brewers in The Washington Post loop.

Jim was catcher for the Philadelphia Athletics during the war. The Montgomery County Park unlimited baseball and softball leagues have team openings. Managers interested may call Blair Smith at Shepherd 1480.

Marine Signs With Giants

Yesterday was a big day for Bob Knight, 20-year-old Quantico Marines' outfielder.

At 9 a.m. he received his honorable discharge after four years in the corps.

At 4:05 p.m., playing in his last baseball game for Quantico (against Haverford College), he crashed into the centerfield fence to make a sensational catch. He had to leave the game with a bruised left shoulder.

And at 9:45 p.m., he was signed by New York Giants Scout Nick Shinkoff, and assigned to the Jersey City club of the International League.

That last step was an especially long one for big Bob. Before he joined the Marines, he had never played baseball for a team.

He served a two-year hitch with the occupation forces in Japan, and played his first complete season of baseball in 1948 for Quantico. Playing 93 games in centerfield, the 6 foot, 195-pound right-hander hit .365.

He attracted the attention of the Giants and Detroit Tigers during Quantico's training camp tour of the past three weeks. Both collected three hits against the Chattanooga Lookouts last week. Shinkoff followed him to Quantico yesterday and signed him for the Giants.

Court Changes Fighting Docusen Brothers' Birth Registration From Negro to White

NEW ORLEANS, March 29 (U.P.).—A civil court judge today ordered the City of New Orleans to change the birth registrations of boxing's Docusen brothers from Negro to white.

The brothers—Bernard, Maxie and Regina—were born of a French-Spanish mother and a Filipino father but erroneously listed in the city records as Negroes, Judge Rene A. Vioasca decided.

The brothers left New Orleans in 1945, when their Negro registration was discovered. A Louisiana law prohibits mixed boxing bouts, so the trio would have been permitted only on Negro cards had they remained in the city of their birth.

Maxie, 20, is the No. 2 challenger for the world lightweight championship. Bernard, 21, was the No. 2 challenger for the welterweight crown until he was beaten a few weeks ago. Regina, 23, is a preliminary fighter. All are on the West Coast.

A registrar of vital statistics was responsible for the mistake. He listed all Filipinos on his records as "Negroes." Therefore, the father of the Docusens was listed as "Negro" on their birth records. He was a fisherman who could not read or write, so he did not know what the registrar had done.

After the Docusens started fighting in New Orleans, reports circulated that they had Negro blood.

In 1944 Regina Docusen, sr., the father, and his wife started suit to have the birth records corrected. But they droped the suit and hired a lawyer to investigate their ancestry.

Sam (Mond) Zelden, the lawyer, traced the father's ancestry in the Philippines back as far as he could—to his great-great-grandparents—and found no trace of Negro blood. He proved that the mother's ancestors were French and Spaniards. She is from Pointe a la Hache, La.

The father did not live to see his sons' birth certificates changed. He and his youngest boy, Nolan, 16, were drowned in a bayou near Biloxi, Miss., in the hurricane of 1947. Their bodies were never found.

Zelden said the brothers' "only disturbing regret is that Regina Docusen, sr., will never know."

So You Feel Sorry For Fight Officials

By Red Smith

New York, March 29 (NYHT).—When a foreign athlete comes to this country and wins and gets robbed, something ought to be done about it. The United States as a Nation is not deeply loved abroad.

The peoples of the world believe enough wrong things about us as it is, and they should not be given grounds for thinking we would bring their guys over here and rack 'em up and knock 'em off simply to fatten our own self-esteem.

Red Smith

Official testimony should be given, publicly, that we welcome foreigners in sport and want them to come and compete with full confidence that they will geta square shake. For this reason, it was proper that Eddie Eagan take some action publicly deploring the decision which robbed France's Robert Villemain of a victory he had earned over Jake LaMotta in a fist fight in Madison Square Garden.

Theoretically it was within the power of Colonel Eagan and his colleagues on the State Athletic Commission to toss out the votes of Harry Ebbets, the referee, and Harold Barnes, a judge, and hand the fight over to Villemain. There is recorded precedent for reversing official decisions in international competition.

AT THE OLYMPIC GAMES last summer, officials awarded a race to a British relay team because a judge declared that the American runners who finished first had exchanged the baton illegally. To the English fans, this was a great deal bigger thing than a decision is to an American fight crowd. Your average American fight fan, unless he is betting or has some special, personal interest in a participant, doesn't give a whoop who wins. He's just there hoping to see somebody belt somebody else good.

But the customers in Wembley Stadium had been sitting there for days in punishing heat and drenching rain generously applauding one foreign victor after another and hungering for a chance to holler for some of their own guys. Then when the victory came, they hated it. They didn't want to have to win on a disqualification.

When movies showed that the judge had been mistaken and the United States had won the relay fairly, an international jury changed the placing, depriving England of its only victory in the meet. And the English fans were gratified. Like them, our fans would have been pleased if the commission had awarded to Villemain a decision he was fairly entitled to have.

HOWEVER, it probably would be a dangerous precedent. A fist fight isn't an open-and-shut affair like a footrace. Even if they had movies to guide them, the commissioners would still be putting their own judgment against that of their ring officials if they reversed the decision. It would be a case of serving notice on judges that in the future they were not to call the shots as they saw them, but rather as they thought Eddie Eagan would see them.

So unless Eddie is willing to do all the judging himself at all the fights, he's got to accept the decisions turned in by his licensed officials. Accordingly, the verdict for LaMotta stands, but the guys who gave Jake the nod won't be getting any more jobs for the time being.

All things considered, that looks like the sanest way of handling an unfortunate situation. Yet one can't help feeling a considerable sympathy for Ebbets and Barnes, who have been suspended indefinitely for holding a minority opinion.

ALL RIGHT, say that in this instance it was not merely a matter of Ebbets and Barnes disagreeing with practically everybody else. Say it was a case of egregious error. Even so, they're being pilloried for a mistake. All of us have disagreed with decisions many times, sometimes mildly and sometimes violently. Yet how often can any of us say with absolute assurance that we were right and the other guy was wrong? Let him who is without astigmatism cast the first optometer.

It is no help to Ebbets and Barnes to point out that both are reputable, experienced officials and that Barnes, after 28 years as a judge, is rated top man in his field.

On the contrary, this only prompts those who are always eager to believe the worst to ask, "if they're as good as all that, how could they be so wrong by accident?"

Those who ask that question aren't going to heed the commission's expression of faith in the officials' integrity; they'll remember only that the poor guys got suspended, same like boxers caught paddling in the tank.

The commission must have appreciated this, but felt that the injustice to Villemain must not go uncensured. It is quite possible the commission was right and it is a waste of time to feel sorry for sports officials, who must know when they take the job that there'll be occasions when their ears will burn.

SOMETIMES YOU WONDER why a guy ever goes in for officiating in sports, but many of them love it and can regale you with cheery tales of their mistakes.

There comes to mind the second game of the 1939 World Series, when Monte Pearson shut out the Reds with two hits. In the Yankee clubhouse Bill Dickey, who had caught Pearson, volunteered praise of Beans Reardon, who, he said, hadn't called more than two or three pitches wrong all day.

"Matter of fact," Beans said later, "I missed just one." And he told about it.

Seems Pearson had thrown one that Reardon called a ball. He meant strike, but he said ball.

"What was wrong with it?" Dickey asked without looking around.

"Nothing," Beans said.

"I thought it was right down the middle," Dickey said.

"It was."

"Then why wasn't it a strike?"

"Because I called it a ball."

"Oh," Dickey said, and threw the ball back to the pitcher.

Parr Says He'll Consider Any 'Bona Fide' Offer

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—Harry A. Parr, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, said today he would consider any "bona fide" offer to buy the Pimlico race track—after the Maryland Legislature adjourns.

Parr and Victor Frenkil, a Baltimore contractor, today exchanged telegrams concerning sale of Pimlico. "We are willing to purchase Pimlico track, waiting to hear from you regarding same," wired Frenkil.

The bill allowing the Jockey Club to operate at Pimlico has passed the State Senate. Less than a week remains for it to get through the House before adjournment.

Arnie Comes From Last to Win at Bowie

Ben Civitello Wins 4 Races, 2d in Another

Bowie, Md., March 29.—With the Rarco Stable's Bull running through the stretch like a victim of a Wyoming blizzard, Jack Rittiner's Arnie came from last position at the half-mile pole to win the Anchorage Purse, featuring the racing program here today.

Bull wasn't the only one in the field of six who looked as if he were dragging anchor. In fact, only Mrs. H. Mumma's Oremurf made a battle of it at the end, falling a half length short of getting to the winner. Ten lengths back came the tired Bull to be third. The others were strung out in faraway places along the stretch.

Arnie, a hot and cold horse during his winter campaigning at New Orleans, was capably handled by Apprentice Patrick S. Boyle and was clocked in 1:45 1/5 for the mile and 70 yards. The winner paid $10.20 after the crowd of 10,000, watching racing under ideal conditions, suffered from spring fever and installed Bull as odds-on choice.

While Apprentice Bennie Civitello, a Newark, Del., boy failed to make Oremurf take the feature, he rode four winners to carry off the day's saddle honors.

Has $17.20 Winner

He took the first to start the daily double aboard Marchan; the third with A. H. McGahey's Ardent Miss, a $6.80 shot, and the fifth with the Progress Stable's Fort Mifflin at $5.60 and A. Cataldi's Tom Ferris at $17.20 in the seventh.

The day's feature brought a minus pool in the show position, so heavy was the third money play on Bull. The deficit cost the track $945.50, which was a pittance to what Bull would have cost his backers had he stopped more abruptly and finished out of the pay circle.

Young Boyle rode a confident race aboard Arnie. He allowed the colt to settle into stride and then took him in hand while in the rear of the field.

Off to Good Start

Bull flattered his backers by hustling from the outside position to take command going to the first turn. He was followed by Riskabule and Beautown.

Bull began to give up approaching the stretch as Arnie and Oremurf got under way in earnest. Boyle swept Arnie into command in the stretch and put him to a strong drive. Oremurf rallied under Civitello's urging but after getting to Arnie's saddle cloth he hung and his rider couldn't narrow the margin from that point into the win.

The daily double paid a healthy $136, despite the fact that the two winners involved were fairly well played. Bernadotte Stable's Marchan paid $10.40. Charles Hartwick's Sea Bees came between horses to take the second at $9.20 while ridden by Jockey Freddie Zehr.

The double returned 67-1 while parlay on the pair figured only 23-1 or $47.80.

Bowie, Md., March 29.—Maryland fans will have their first chance to see Henry Hecht's The Pincher, formidable Preakness candidate, perform as a 3-year-old on the Wednesday card. Carrying top weight of 122 pounds, the colt goes in the $10,000-added Farrell, Bowie's newest stake. Opposing him will be Jam Session, winner of his only three starts and Galloping Gus, both from the Gustave Ring barn. In all, a field of 10 has been named. Jockey Danny Scocca, Washington boy, is working for the C. V. Whitney stable and goes to New York. Clarence Picou, 1948 apprentice sensation, is with that outfit now. See you on the rail.

MAN FAINTS AT LOW PRICES

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 30—

The high cost of living took its toll in reverse today. Joe Smudge is so used to paying high prices for everything that when he ran into a low price for a better product, he bit the dust!

Seems a friend lent him a wonderful razor blade—PAL Hollow Ground. Joe went to the store to get some more. "How much?" asked Joe. "Still only 10¢ for 4," said the clerk. That's when Smudge fainted.

"What?" said Joe when he came to, "Why I pay twice that for blades that aren't half as good."

P.S.: Don't be fooled by price. Try Pal Hollow Ground yourself. You still get 4 for 10¢, 10 for 25¢, 21 for 49¢, 44 for 98¢. For either Double or Single Edge razors.

7th Inning Rally Spoils His Shutout

Bradenton, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Big John Sain, 20-game winner for the past three seasons, went the full nine-inning distance for the first time this spring today as the Boston Braves subdued the Cincinnati Reds, 8-3.

Sain's mastery was virtually complete. He toyed with the Reds for six innings, granting but two scattered hits. In the seventh they tied together three more, capped by "Red" Stallcup's triple, to score a pair. In the ninth, an error by Bob Elliott put their final run abroad and that scored on Stallcup's long fly to center.

One Witness Heard

Congress Tees Off on Golf Problem But Time Too Short

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Congressional performance at yesterday's first hearing in the public golf investigation was somewhat stymied.

In the first place, the session was much too brief. Although a dozen witnesses were on hand to testify before the Public Lands special subcommittee, only one was heard.

Then, when Representative Norris Poulson (R., Calif.), a certified public accountant, did ask a few highly interesting financial questions, they couldn't be answered because—

A. E. Demaray, associate director of National Park Service, told Poulson that the Interior Department still was conducting an audit of the books of S. G. Leoffler, concessionaire since 1921.

Before the California Congressman took over, Demaray read a statement in which he said Leoffler could be complimented for having done an outstanding job in many respects.

Demaray cited the low greens fees, the substantial increase of golf facilities and reported that Leoffler always heeded promptly any suggestions by the Interior Department.

Demaray also dwelt on a report submitted by Herb Graffis, editor of Golfdom, saying the District's public golf courses compare favorably with any in the country. Graffis said the Washington job has been "well done."

Poulson then started to fire financial questions at Demaray. He started by asking if Leoffler was bonded. Poulson explained that he frequently handles $60,000 to $75,000 belonging to the Government.

Demaray fumblingly replied that he didn't know anything about a bond. He turned to Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks. Gartside replied, "There's no bond, but there's a protective provision in the contract."

The Californian asked for detailed statements regarding distribution of last year's profits, closer accounting of the $16,772 rehabilitation fund and a complete explanation of the sum which Interior says its owes Loeffler.

To these questions, Demaray replied they couldn't be answered until the Interior Department makes a "much more complete audit of all figures covering the 1944-48 period." Demaray added that his office received Government Accounting Office reports for this period showing discrepancies of less than $800.

Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.), chairman of the subcommittee, adjourned the meeting so that its members could report to the House floor.

The North Carolinian requested Demaray to turn over all the facts and figures requested as soon as possible. On the stand Demaray said he had no idea of when they would be available, but claimed every available auditor was working on them. Later, he said they should be ready in a week.

Proceedings got under way when Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) explained his reasons for asking Congress to conduct a thorough investigation.

Said Rivers, in part: "In some quarters it has been suggested that large sums of money have been realized as a result of partiality to the present concessionaire. These are serious allegations.

"I think the committee would render the Congress an invaluable service if it would explore these statements."

Rivers concluded: "We should let the chips fall where they may. If there has been indifference, negligence and dishonesty, this should be exposed. If there has been good management, good faith and value received, all interested parties should receive this credit."

At the outset, Rivers said he wished to state, unequivocally, that he had no interest in any of the contending parties. He claimed his only interest is to insure the Government and the patrons alike "sound management and value received."

Rivers then asked permission to appear from time to time to question witnesses. Chairman Redden said the subcommittee would take up his request

J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.) acting chairman of the full Public Lands Committee and a member of the subcommittee, said "Congress itself is going to have to work out a policy for concessions."

Redden said he wouldn't call the next hearing until he received full financial reports from the Interior Department.

Central Figures In Golf Hearing

A. E. Demaray, left, was the lone witness the Public Lands Subcommittee had time to hear yesterday as its probe of the local public golf courses began. The Interior Department official strongly supported S. G. Leoffler, center, concessionaire since 1921. At right is Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) who explained his reasons for calling for a congressional investigation.

Hoyas Play Dartmouth

Joe Judge turns loose his veteran Georgetown nine against Dartmouth in the season's opener for both clubs today at medical school field.

Righthander Tommy Flynn, who appeared in 15 games last season, winning seven and losing three, is the probable Georgetown starter. Bill Carroll figures to relieve Flynn.

The Hoyas are embarking on a 37-game schedule, longest for any college hereabouts. Georgetown won 16, lost 9 and tied 1 last year and has just about the same crew back.

Familiar names dot the Hoyas lineup. It includes Joe DiLeo at first, Al Naples at short, Dick Falvey at third and an outfield composed of Ray Corley, Elmer Raba and Frank Alagia.

Tomorrow the Hoyas entertain Rutgers; Friday, Michigan, and Saturday, Cornell.

Delaware, 5-2 conqueror of Maryland yesterday, travels to Annapolis for an engagement with Navy today. The Middies opened their season Saturday with a 12-2 win over Colby. Coach Max Bishop again expects to use Righthander Lee Rensberger.

Garvin's Grill Beats Waves to Gain Finals

Carvins's Grill last night nosed out the Waves, 27-25, in the women's semifinals. The Waves missed two foul shots in the last five seconds. Ethel Estes paced Garvin'swith 11 points.

In the other semi-final played at Roosevelt, Raleigh's Sport Shop won, 38-31, over the F. B. I., as Helen Sorenson took top honors for the victors with 15 poins.

Pimlico Issue Brews . . .

Maryland Senate Passes Bill Giving Trot Racing 125 Days

Annapolis, Md., March 29 (AP).—The State Senate voted today to allow 125 days of harness racing each year in Maryland. The decision came with a calm much in contrast to the bickering over racing which has gone on for days.

The harness bill went to the house, where already tension was building up over another race measure—to allow Pimlico track to move to Laurel.

The Senate has approved the Pimlico move. The same groups which fought there shifted their pressure to the House.

There was no open House action but the supporters of Pimlico and the backers of Bowie track wrestled mightily with delegates individually.

The issue is whether the Maryland Jockey Club, which owns both Pimclio and Laurel, will be allowed a total of 50 days racing at the plant between Baltimore and Washington.

The harness racing bill would increase the total days of that type of racing from 100 to 125.

It received some strong opposition, too, during early debate but only the 'ayes" and noes" were heard today.

The vote was 23 to 6. Senator Della (D., Baltimore sixth) who had opposed it, stood by his guns along with five others.

Meanwhile, there was no indication when the House would begin debate on whether to allow Pimlico to pick up a $700,000 improvement fund at the northwest Baltimore plant and use it to build up Laurel.

Bowie people argue this will concentrate too much racing in a small section of southern Maryland.

Terps Bow, 5-2, To Delaware

Behind the hit pitching of curveballer George Frederick, the University of Delaware dealt Maryland a 5-2 beating yesterday in the baseball opener for both teams at College Park.

Tony Sileo drove in both Maryland runs. In the fourth inning, he singled across Herman Smith, who had doubled. And in the eighth, he singled over Al Cesky, who has walked, and reached third on infield outs.

talk to no one. I get into a car and I drive pretty hard for a while, until the feeling wears off. Sometimes it's hours, and I don't come back until I'm changed in my mind. Mostly, though, I don't like big cars as much as I did when I first got to own them. I got a Buick Roadmaster for my mother because she can't get around so good on her legs, she worked herself out for us. She's got a right to a car.

I bought a Studebaker for my sister Vunies and cars for Marva. I don't count that money thrown away. I paid for Vunies to get through high school and college, but that made me proud. She finished in Howard University in June 1940.

Now she teaches English in Garfield Intermediate in Detroit. She's got a master's degree in history. I'm proud of Vunies. I came down to see her graduate from Howard. President Mordecai Johnson took me up to the platform and my mother and my sister Eulalia were there. That was a big day for us Barrows.

I don't count that money wasted.

School Board Denies Arlington Hearing

Board Votes To Advertise Tax Increase

The Arlington County Board last night voted to advertise a possible 89-cent increase in the county's present tax rate.

The board, however, indicated the increase actually may be considerably less when the county's 1949-50 budget is finally approved.

Mrs. Florence Cannon, the board member who made the motion for the advertisement, said she was "not necessarily in favor" of the 89-cent increase, and Board Member F. Freeland Chew said he definitely is not in favor of it.

The boost was recommended by County Manager A. T. Lundberg who has said it will be necessary to raise a proposed $9,115,457 county budget.

The board last night set April 19 as the date for a hearing on any tax increase. It must adopt the budget by April 30.

In other actions the board agreed to appropriate $3000 to hire an assistant trial justice for night duty to arraign arrested persons and set bonds for them. Persons arrested at night now must wait in county jail for a hearing in County Court next morning.

Hadassah Services

Friday services at 8:30 p. m. at the Arlington Jewish Center, 2920 Lee blvd., will be sponsored by the Arlington-Fairfax Chapter of Hadassah and the Senior Judaea Girls. Mrs. Raphael Turover, Washington representative of the national board of Hadassah, will speak.

The Arlington School Board last night refused a request that it hold a public hearing on selection of school superintendent for the next four years.

At a meeting in the James Monroe School, the five board members expressed belief that it wasn't "ethical or fair' 'to discuss personal matters at a public meeting.

The request for the hearing came in a petition signed by 16 Arlington residents who want Fletcher Kemp, the present superintendent, reappointed.

May 1 Is Deadline

The School Board must name the superintendent for the next four years by May 1. Opposition has been expressed by some board members to Kemp, who will have completed 32 years in office on June 30.

The board last night also approved a recommended program calling for tighter handling of athletic funds at Washington-Lee High School.

It approved four of the five points recommended by auditors who surveyed the athletic funds from 1945 until last January 31, when a deficit of $3394 had been reported.

Suggestions Listed

The auditors suggested better control of receipts and disbursements in the athletic fund; centralized purchase of athletic equipment and an organized schedule to repay the Arlington County Board the $24,000 expended for night lighting at the high school stadium.

But the Board disagreed with the auditors' recommendation that an athletic advisory committee—including no high school personnel—be appointed to supervise the athletic funds. A substitute proposal, to include the school principal and coaches, will be worked out by the board.

U. S. Official Sees Crisis For Schools

Philadelphia, March 29 (U.P.).—A Federal Government official said today that 22 per cent of the school children in the United States are in overcrowded classrooms.

The Nation is faced with the worst school building crisis in history, said Dr. Ray L. Hamon, chief of the U. S. Office of Education school housing division. More than eight billion dollars is needed for new school construction. Hamon told the regional meeting of the American Association of School Administrators.

Hamon said thousands of school districts, including some entire States, cannot provide pupils with even minimum school needs. He urged all States to assist local school boards in constructing adequate school buildings, and emphasized that Federal aid also is needed.

Congress Nearing Showdown on Raises For U. S. Workers

Supporters of a new Federal employe pay raise are maneuvering for a showdown in both the Senate and House Postoffice and Civil Service Committees.

The House group is working behind the scenes. The Senate bloc is out in the open.

The House committee will meet a week from today on the executive pay bill. At that time, if present plans are carried out, a motion will be made to amend the bill to provide for a flat increase of either $300 or $350 for each of the classified and postal employes.

Meantime, a check is being made of committee members to determine how much support the motion would get. At least one member believes the motion would be carried. However, he and his colleagues who support a flat increase don't want to chance a defeat for fear it would kill pay-raise chances for this session of Congress.

In the Senate committee, Chairman Johnston has ordered his staff to make arrangements for immediate public hearings on his bills to grant $650 flat increases to postal and classified employes. It's a good bet that the Administration will oppose the bills.

Senate Democratic leaders are reported to have decided tentatively to assign Senators Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Graham (D., N. C.) to the Civil Service Committee. If that happens, Chairman Johnston will appoint them to the pay-raise subcommittee whose chairman is Senator Long (D., La.). Both Humphrey and Graham can be expected to support cost-of-living pay raises.

STORY: Diplomats at the State Department tell this fish story which reflects the tense situation in Berlin:

Two Germans were fishing on the side of a river that runs through Berlin, one on the Russian side and the other on the United States side. The German on the Russian side couldn't even get a bite, let alone a fish. The man on the United States side pulled in one big fish after another. Finally, the fisherman on the Russian side shouted:

"Why is it that you get all the fish and I can't even get a nibble over here?"

"Why, that's simple," explained the man on the United States side, "the fish over here aren't afraid to open their mouths."

PEOPLE: Horace Wilcox, assistant chief of Agriculture's photographic section, retires today which is his seventieth birthday . . . J. Gilman Reid is the new chief of the engineering electronics laboratory at the Bureau of Standards . . . Charles B. Coates will be vice chairman and general manager of the newly formed citizens committee which will carry on the battle for reorganization of the Government. He handled publicity for the Hoover Commission and he resigned as assistant director of public relations for General Foods to devote full time to his new post.

FIRINGS: Those who charge it's difficult to fire a Federal worker are now pointing to a current case to back up their accusations. This is the case:

Nearly a year ago Tighe Woods, the rent control boss, fired Bob Yost, his New York regional director, for insubordination. Yost appealed and won a decision from the New York regional Civil Service office. Woods appealed to the full commission here and he lost again. So, he restored Yost to his job.

A short time afterward, Woods fired Yost again on a charge of insubordination. And again Yost appealed and won a decision from the New York office. And again Woods appealed to the full commission here and the case was heard yesterday. The OHE is short of money, but Woods brought 70-odd witnesses here to testify. The case has taken days of valuable time of many OHE employes and officials.

Woods said that if the Civil Service Commission forced him to rehire Yost that it would be impossible for him to maintain any discipline among his 5000 employes. He accused Yost of refusing to follow his orders and policies.

Yost had the support of John Edelman and Leo Goodman, both of the CIO, and Gardner Jackson who solicited OHE employes for funds to fight the case.

Dairies Ask Milk Price Cut Sanction In Virginia

3 Firms Petition State Commission To Approve Lower Farmer Payments

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Three dairies serving northern Virginia yesterday asked the Virginia State Milk Commission to grant price cuts that would result in decreases of one to two cents a quart to the consumer.

Urging decreases in the price paid to producers—which would be reflected in savings to the housewife—were spokesmen for the Chestnut Farms - Chevy Chase Dairy, the Alexandria Dairy Products Co., and the Thompson Dairy. All do a large volume of business in Alexandria, Arlington and part of Fairfax.

The commission heard arguments pro and con on the proposal during a public hearing at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria. The commission will meet again tonight in the Monticello Hotel, Norfolk, and may announce a decision following the session.

Opposing the proposed reduction was Bruce B. Derrick, representing the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which claims a membership of 1573 dairy farmers.

Maurice V. Davison, vice president of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, urged that the commission lower the price the dairy pays the producer by $1 per 100 pounds of milk. He said such action would result in a cut of 2 cents a quart to the consumer.

Other Requests

Michael H. Burchell, secretary-treasurer of the Alexandria Dairy Products Co., asked that the price paid producers by the dairy be lowered by 69 cents per 100 pounds.

Robert Rawlins, production manager of the Thompson Dairy, advocated a cut in prices paid to producers of 50 cents per 100 pounds. He said such a cut would result in a 1 cent a quart saving to the consumer.

Derrick, opposing the proposals, said farmers' costs have increased. He said despite this general upturn, the producers did not have a price increase for their milk in 1947 or last year.

Sliding Scale Suggested

He said he would "reluctantly" agree to a compromise plan of a sliding scale type, with prices dairies pay producers cut 50 cents per hundred pounds as of April 1, then raised 50 cents on July 1, upped another 50 cents on October 1 and then lowered by the same amount next January 1.

The commission turned thumbs down on this proposal with the comment that it couldn't commit itself to a price increase in the future at this time.

Competition Reported

Dairy spokesman said one of the chief causes for recent milk price reductions here was competition from "cheap milk" from the Midwest. They produced figures showing that milk can be shipped here from Illinois and Wisconsin for as much as $2 per hundredweight less than is paid local producers.

Davison admitted that the quality of local milk is higher than the so-called "emergency" imported product, but warned that "we must move to bring the price we pay and the price of emergency milk closer together."

Dr. Tipton R. Snavely of Charlottesville, Va., is commission chairman. His colleagues are E. O. Miller, Newport News, Va., and Mark Turner, Herndon, Va.

Pittsburgh, March 29 (AP).—The wife of a Belgian diplomat asked for a divorce in Common Pleas Court today because, she said, "he never wanted to go to any Washington cocktail parties."

Chairman Taking List Of Names To President

Will 'Consider' Morgan's, Not Necessarily Indorse Him, as Customary

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senator J. Howard McGrath expects soon to take "a list" of Democratic candidates for District Commissioner to the White House for consideration by President Truman, the Senator told The Washington Post yesterday.

The Rhode Island Senator has a double interest in the question of who will get the presidential nomination when Commissioner John Russell Young's present term expires May 17. McGrath is chairman of both the Democratic National Committee and the Senate District Committee. The Senate group will pass on the nomination which requires Senate confirmation.

While he has "some definite ideas" about who should get the job, McGrath said he does not want to talk about specific candidates at this time.

Will Talk It Over With Chief

McGrath added he would "sit down and talk it over with the President" when he presents the "list."

He said he has heard "lots of names" mentioned for the $10,000-a-year three-year post. Thus far, however, only three men have received indorsements by various District groups and organizations: Young, a Republican, and two Democrats, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., who has the official backing of the local party committtee, and Negro Attorney Charles H. Houston.

The Morgan indorsement by the District Democratic Central Committee is due to reach national party headquarters in a few days, along with indorsements by the local national committeeman and national committeewoman, Melvin D. Hildreth and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

Morgan's Name on List, Too

Normal procedure is for the national chairman to approve the choice of the local group, providing it is unanimous as in the Morgan case, and send it to the White House.

McGrath said, however, he will consider Morgan's name, when it reaches him, and he indicated it would go on the "list" to be presented to the President. Presumably at that time McGrath will express his own choice to Mr. Truman.

'Psychological Torture' Made James Defense

Annapolis, Md., March 23 (AP).—A defense lawyer argued today that police wrung a confession from Eugene H. James by "psychological torture."

Attorney William H. Murphy told the Court of Appeals that "protracted questioning" and "long confinement" amounted to "an attack on the human mind" which was "more sinister than the use of force."

James, a 32-year-old handyman, was convicted last fall of murdering 11-year-old Marsha Brill in Baltimore July 6.

James is also under indictment in Washington for the similar slaying 9 days earlier of Carol Bardwell, also 11 years old, in Rock Creek Park.

Defense Attorney Murphy asked the high court to save James from the gallows by ordering a new trial in Baltimore Criminal Court.

After an hour's oral argument, Maryland's highest court took the case under advisement. Its decision is not expected to be handed down until after April 26.

Assistant Attorney General Harrison L. Winter denied the use of "psychological coercion" by Baltimore police.

The evidence showed an "absolute and total lack of physical force or intimidation," Winters said.

He said psychological coercion would be "an extremely nebulous and difficult thing to determine."

James, a part-time janitor and handyman, has been described in court as a high-grade moron with a mental age of 9 and as a schizophrenic with separate Jekyll and Hyde personalities.

He showed "evidence of hostility toward the immature female," Dr. Philip F. Lerner, a defense psychologist, has testified.

The confession said James emerged from the bushes along a Baltimore Boulevard at high noon and stabbed the girl with a butcher knife as she bicycled down the street with two companions.

He said "a dizzy spell" came over him when he saw Marsha.

The defense asked a new trial on the ground the State failed to prove premeditation.

Planned Fairfax 'City' to Get Needed Water Supply June 1

Development of the eastern portion of Fairfax County, Va., including a proposed "city" of 5000 homes on a 2300-acre tract at Springfield, will be hastened through extension of water lines now under way.

The Virginia Water Co., a subsidiary of the Alexandria Water Co., already has started extension of mains to the area, and is expected to arrive at the Springfield site by June 1, according to Edward S. Holland, engineer, representing Carr, Inc., developers.

The Springfield project, announced in 1947, will have its own sewer system and disposal plant. Construction of the first homes is expected to begin shortly after the water arrives, Holland added.

When completed, the project will be Fairfax County's largest "city," Holland said. Estimates of its cost have run as high as 75 million dollars.

The developers drilled several wells in March, 1948, but failed to find sufficient water.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors already has rezoned 2100 acres for the planned community of 25,000. The former farmland is cut into rural, suburban, urban residential, rural and general business and industrial zones.

The site lies 3 miles south of Annandale, just west of the Shirley hwy., expected to be open to Springfield by May 15.

Carr, Inc., developers, is headed by Edward R. Carr, builder-realtor who developed the Yates Gardens section of Alexandria, Va., and other subdivisions.

D. C. Man Missing Since March 13 Found in Potomac

The body of a 46-year-old man reported missing since March 13 was found floating in the Potomac River off Hains Point yesterday by two 20-year-old youths in an outboard motorboat.

The man was identified as Clarence W. Offenbacher, 809 H st. nw., by his son, Clarence, jr., 20. The body had been discovered about 2 p. m. by David Friedman, 503 E. Schuyler rd., Silver Spring, Md., and Marty Blaker, 945 Randolph st. nw., who yelled the information ashore to a cab driver, who in turn called police.

Offenbacher's wife, Laura, in reporting her husband missing on March 13, told police he had a broken left wrist and a fractured right leg, received in an accident January 17 while working for a Richmond, Va., glass company.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald has scheduled an autopsy for this morning.

Painter Overcome On Boat, Rescued

A 28-year-old painter was rescued from an airtight compartment of a Potomac River Lines Inc. excursion boat last night after he apparently became overcome by paint fumes.

According to police, Herbert Bullock was found unconscious in the ship's hold about 10 p. m. Police said he lived aboard the steamer, the Robert E. Lee, now docked at Maine ave and O st. sw.

Workmen said he went below decks to paint about 4 p. m. They did not know how long he had been unconscious. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in undetermined condition.

Shoe Officials Meet to Discuss X-Ray Hazards

District Health Department officials have invited shoe store representatives to meet with them today to discuss potential dangers of X-rays in shoe-fitting equipment.

The meeting was called by William H. Cary, jr., director of the department's Bureau Health Engineering. Attending, Cary said, will be Peter J. Valaer, industrial hygienist for the bureau.

Cary said the District has no regulations governing use of the machines, nor are any presently contemplated. They were described in a recent national magazine as potentially dangerous to the patrons.

A 10-months-old child was burned yesterday when she toppled off her high chair next to the kitchen stove while her mother was out of the room and brought a pot of boiling water down on herself.

Linda Marie Steele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Steele, 4631 Hanna pl. se., was taken to Providence Hospital. She suffered burns to about 30 per cent of her body, attendants said.

Mrs. Steele had left the kitchen for a moment to see to another daughter, Jacqueline Lee, 2 years old.

Mrs. Hogan Leaves Estate Of $915,000

Mrs. Mary Adair Hogan, 71, left an estate of more than $915,000 it was learned yesterday when her will was filed for probate in District Court.

Mrs. Hogan was the widow of Frank J. Hogan, former American Bar Association president, and died Saturday at her home, 2320 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Under her will, virtually the entire estate is put into a trust, the income for the benefit of her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Hogan Guider of Littleton, N. H.

Eventually, the trust will be divided equally between three grandchildren, Miss Elizabeth Hogan Guider and Frank Hogan Guider, both of Littleton, and Mrs. Edward B. Williams, 1530 16th st. nw.

Col. O'Laughlin Estate Totals Over $250,000

The late Col. John C. O'Laughlin, publisher of the Army and Navy Journal, left an estate of slightly more than $250,000, according to the petition for probate of his will yesterday in District Court.

Under the will, all outstanding stock in the publication goes to the Gridiron Club, its income to be used for charitable or educational purposes. Book value was placed in the probate papers at $102,461, but friends of Mr. O'Laughlin placed its value at approximately $500,000.

Gifts of antique furniture, jewelry and art works go to personal friends, Georgetown University and the Roosevelt Memorial Association of New York.

After all bequests are taken care of, the remainder goes to the Army Relief Society, the Navy Relief Society and the Air Force Aid Society.

Mr. O'Laughlin, who was Assistant Secretary of State under President Theodore Roosevelt, died March 14.

Statements Link 3 With Gant Slaying

Statements implicating three men as the robbery-slayers of John Gant, 6105 Eads st. ne., were read in District Court yesterday as the final evidence offered by the prosecution.

The statements were signed and given police by the three defendants on trial for Gant's killing. They are John B. Greenleaf, 37, of Fairmont Heights, Md.; Edward J. Blake, 21, of Fairmont Heights, and Leroy Lewis Smith, 25, of Landover, Md.

Greenleaf, in his statement, admitted striking Gant with a brick "to see if he had any money."

The statement by Blake indicated he had taken $10 from the victim's pocket during the affray, but had not attacked him.

Smith's statement related he had merely been in the vicinity of the murder, which occurred September 15 in the 1600 block of Dix st. ne.

Testifying as the first defense witness, Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief alienist for the District, said he examined Blake on three occasions and found him to be a "high grade imbecile."

District Bar Association Votes $5000 Advertising Campaign

The District Bar Association last night voted approval of an institutional advertising campaign to acquaint the public with the ethics and services of the legal profession.

The project, carrying with it a $5000 budget, was proposed by special committees of the board of directors, headed by Alfred Goldstein and Edmond Campbell.

Speakers supporting the proposal criticized banks, real estate brokers and accountants, among others, who they said were absorbing business that rightly should go to attorneys.

Another proposal of the special committees—the hiring of a full-time executive secretary to maintain liaison between the association, the public and legislative agencies—also was approved by a voice vote.

The group defeated a third proposal—to set up a referral panel of lawyers for the use of laymen who are seeking legal advice without knowing whom to select as an attorney. It was proposed to offer the panel to prospective clients for his selection of one at a moderate fee for consultation. The meeting, a special session, was held in the Mayflower.

Family of Whidden, Arrested In Entry Attempt, Loses Home

Clayton D. Whidden, 24, a former Marine who said he tried to break into an Alexandria grocery March 15 because his wife and three children were without food, may soon be homeless.

In Alexandria Civil Court yesterday, Judge Harry F. Kennedy gave possession of Whidden's $100-a-month apartment at 411 E. Raymond ave., Alexandria, to the owner, Miss Helen Calvert, for nonpayment of rent.

Miss Calvert did not ask judgment for $59.98 in unpaid rent, which she had included in her original suit.

The Alexandria Department of Public Welfare said it had no luck in finding the Whiddens a home renting within their means.

Whidden, who is scheduled for a rehearing in Alexandria Police Court April 8 on a charge of attempted housebreaking, obtained a job three days after his arrest with a Washington department store.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Man, 25, With Three Years to Go Before His Postwar Education Is Completed, Asks if He Should Marry Now and Lean on Wife's Wages

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Like many other young men of my generation, my preparation for adult living was delayed several years by Army duty. I am now 25 and it will be three years more before I complete my education.

I have been dating a girl who is a fellow student at the local university for almost two years, and we are very much in love. If I were to follow my impulses, I would marry her today; but I must face facts.

Next year my federal subsidy for veteran-education will expire, leaving me two years to go before I get my final degree, and in that time it would be impossible for me to support a wife and stay in school. Yet Jean and I feel a great need of each other; and she wants us to marry now, that we may enjoy the true companionship of married life.

Girl Would Be Happy to Help

JEAN WILL graduate this year and she says she will be more than glad to work and finance our domestic upkeep until such time as I can assume a husband's financial obligations. I don't believe it would be fair to accept support from Jean while I finish school; but she insists it is the course that would make her most happy.

I am torn between intense desire for her, and equal desire to keep my self respect by waiting until I am financially able to marry. What do you think I should do? C. B.

Wise Men Adjust to New Conditions

DEAR C. B.: Your emotional dilemma brings to mind James Russell Lowell's lines in a poem titled "The Present Crisis," written in the last century. He says, "New occasions teach new duties. Time makes ancient good uncouth. They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth."

Altogether this is a wonderful poem, pulsating with spiritual power, lighted by lofty vision, a message to strengthen the soul of any thoughtful man, underscoring eternal values and giving clear perspective on vital choices of action. So dig it out of the school library and study it now, as an antidote to your nearsighted confusion.

But back to Lowell's statement that "new occasions teach new duties." His observation seems to me to apply especially to the prevalent question of whether veteran-students ought to marry in mid-course of education, if it means accepting partial support from bride or parents, or parents-in-law.

Man Is Anchored to Ancient Code

MANY SO-CALLED conservative persons tend to feel as you do, that such a choice isn't compatible with self respect in the man. But in general, that assumption is borrowed from ancient thinking, from outlived folkways, when "nice" women had no means of livelihood except support from a man—either a husband, father or other "honorably" related male provider.

The genteel female's only alternative, otherwise, was to be a dependent slavey in somebody's household; because it was "unthinkable" for her to compete with men in the educated professions or in the so-called business world. Her opportunities to be self-supporting in such respected citizen roles represent a hard-fought social gain of the 20th century—which a few brave women down through history pioneered at expense of great ridicule.

Increasingly since the 1920s, women have tackled salaried detail-work in the professions and trades; and since World War 2, a tidal wave of young women are wage-earning to make marriage possible—for precisely the reasons that Jean is arguing. They wish to marry in normal season; they are facing new economic problems, and they are willing to accept the "new duties" indicated. And the man in your shoes, who gamely cooperates in that modern trend, has nothing to apologize for. M. H.

Mrs. William Goldberg (right) welcomes the wife of the first Israeli Ambassador to the United States. Mrs. Eliahu Elath, to the Taos Sisterhood luncheon and fashion show. The second annual donor luncheon of the sisterhood was held yesterday at the Statler Hotel

Rep. Woodhouse, Fashion Show Highlight Taos Luncheon

A fashion show and a greeting from Representative Chase Going Woodhouse of Connecticut were the highlights of the second annual donor luncheon of Taos Sisterhood at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Over 500 persons attended the luncheon fo the Taos Sisterhood, which combines the Ohev Sholom, Tifereth Israel and Agudath Achim Sisterhoods.

Representative Woodhouse commended the women for their high idealism in living up to their name "taos" which means "peace." If every woman in the world were asked what her one wish would be, she said, every tenth woman would say, "I wish for peace."

Sitting in the House of Representatives, she sometimes thinks about how many universities we could have built, how many houses the United States would have had if it had not been necessary to fight two world wars, Representative Woodhouse said.

The North Atlantic Pact was termed by the Connecticut Representative as an alliance of peace-loving countries, not to prepare for war, but to make peace possible.

She paid tribute to one of the guests at the Sisterhood, Mrs. Eliahu Elath, the wife of the Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

She stated that "as the citizens of the greatest, richest and most powerful country in the world, we have a responsibility to get the world back, not only on its economic feet, but spiritually as well."

The fashion show following the luncheon was presented by Woodward and Lothrop. Mrs. William Goldberg was general chairman for the luncheon, assisted by Miss Ceilia Blumenthal, Mrs. Philip Silverstone and Mrs. Irwin Bolotin.

Laurence G. Hoes To Address Club De Las Americas

Laurence Gouverneur Hoes, a great-grandson of President James Monroe and secretary of James Monroe Memorial Foundation, Inc., of Fredericksburg, Va., will address the Club de las Americas in its weekly seminar Thursday, March 31, at 8 p. m. in the Department of Commerce Building, Room 2631. He will speak on the "Monroe Doctrine and the Good-Neighbor Policy."

Mr. Hoes established the first memorial in this country to his famous great-grandfather, President James Monroe, in Fredericksburg, Va., in 1927, and opened to the public the building in which President James Monroe practiced law when a young man. The motive behind the memorial in Fredericksburg is to diffuse throughout the Western Hemisphere the ideals of President Monroe and his doctrine, which has served the purpose of keeping the republics of this hemisphere out of the political influence of Europe.

FLYBACK bolero maternity costume in navy crepe is a trim Easter frock for the lady-in-waiting. One-piece dress, under jacket, is finely pleated front and has a cap-sleeved silk print bodice in navy and white. Waistline is adjustable. Available at the Stork Set Shop.

Mother-to-Be, Well-Dressed, Keeping Trim, Is Twice Blessed

By Peggy Preston

"KEEP your weight down and your spirits up" is the doctor's usual advice to the expectant mother.

Now, that's easier said than done, as any mother-to-be will tell you. Why, the clothes problem alone is enough to send her ego down to zero. The woman who is going to have a baby seldom feels exactly herself, and the new type of clothes she must wear are not helpful, for they, too, seem strange and alien.

It is possible, however, to get becoming maternity clothes. And, if carefully chosen, the right wardrobe can be just what the doctor ordered. It can lift spirits, and by helping a woman look her best, encourage her to keep her weight down to a minimum.

This spring and summer, she might own a dress or two with a sashed waistline. The sash is being generally sponsored throughout maternity collections. Reasoning on this particular trend was quite sound, for the sash is softening even to the larger waistline, it is comfortable, and it covers up such "adjustables" as snaps, buttons or drawstrings.

Other items in her wardrobe could be a flyback bolero and dress; a sundress with jacket or stole; a silk print or polka-dotted dress, and several of the pretty, go-anywhere cottons of the coming season.

SUGGESTIONS include a full-skirted voile dress in miniature red apple print, the neckline coolly scooped and the waist sashed with black velvet ribbon, a festive yellow cotton, banded through the midriff and comfortably short-sleeved with fold-tucked shoulders; a Paisley cotton, sashed from the sides, and matched with a wide, fringed stole.

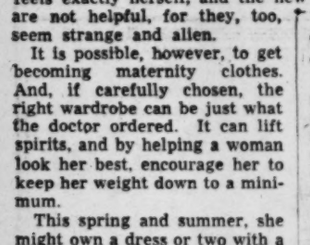

Such dresses as the Paisley print are double blessings. Cool and washable, they are cheerful as well. They are suitable for almost any summer occasion, are decorative enough for little gatherings at home.

A dark costume, say in sheer navy crepe, is as much a necessity for the expectant mother as for anyone else. There are many days when, because of the weather or occasion, nothing else is quite so appropriate. Don't be afraid to brighten it up with accessories when you feel the need of some new color and dash. Clean, sparkling white touches are wonderful against navy and pink, lilac and all the range of rose tones combine beautifully with navy, and do things for your complexion as well.

Margaret's Choice For Spring Is Red, White, and Blue

LADIES OF THE FIRST FAMILY are turning thoughts to spring fashions. No definite selections have been made for Easter, but is is said that Madame Agasta has designed a handsome bonnet for Mrs. Truman, and Margaret has a new spring wardrobe made for her by Madame Pola of New York.

Miss Reathel M. Odum, White House secretary, who shares an apartment with Miss Truman in New York, writes that Margaret steps out these days in a Navy blue dress worn with red wool coat and a print dress worn with white wool coat.

The Navy dress has long sleeves, is cut on princess style, and has a tie that goes around, crosses in back and then ties in front. Her white coat is full length and fitted, and her red coat is full length and loose.

Miss Truman has not decided whether she will spend Easter in New York or Washington, Mrs. James Helm, White House social secretary, told the press yesterday.

Mrs. Truman will launch the Lily Parade for Crippled Children on Friday, April 8, by buying a lily from Miss Drucie Snyder, who will come to Blair House. The following day Mrs. Truman will attend the Home and Embassy benefit tour for the Washington Home for Incurables, stopping for tea at the British Embassy.

Styles Are Subtle In '49, NCJW Told

A SOFT SPOKEN French girl, and a parade of American fashions were the chief attractions at the donor tea given yesterday in the Terrace Room of the Shoreham Hotel by the D. C. Section, National Council of Jewish Women.

Guest of honor was Mlle. Fenia Sorkine of Paris, who is the twenty-fifth European student to be awarded a scholarship by the council. In this country seven months, she is currently taking a twoyear cuorse in social service work at Boston University.

Mademoiselle Sorkine, a tall, brown-haired young woman, is a graduate of the Sorbonne, and did social work in Paris before the war. Until her arrest by the Nazis she did great service to Jewish families in the city by obtaining false identity cards and funds which enabled them to send their children into safe hiding places. Upon her return to France she will continue her work in social service centers specializing in problems of children and adolescents.

Yesterday, in a brief talk before the council, she expressed her thanks to the organization for making her visit to this country possible.

"It is like finding Santa Claus again, after you no longer believe he existed," she told the group.

Among the guests of honor at the affair were Madame Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Madame Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, and Mrs. Elath, wife of the Minister of Israel.

COMMENTATOR for the fashion show which followed the first part of the afternoon's program, was Miss Angeline Daugherty, merchandise editor of Vogue magazine.

Speaking briefly on "Fashion—As Vogue Sees It," Miss Daugherty pointed out that style is as you find it—and like it, this season. "No longer can you lengthen your skirt, or shorten it, a couple of inches, and consider yourself to be in the best of fashion," she said. "One needs to be subtle and original to be well dressed this year. Style has again become a matter of small touches, good color and excellent line."

Illustrating her talk with the collection of costumes by Adele Simpson which was presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co., Miss Daugherty pointed out the following highlights for fashion, 1949:

1. The demure, natural shoulder, "which has shrugged itself into every dress we own."
2. Low, portrait necklines which point up a trim, neat head.
3. "Skirt lengths that are a matter between you, your mirror, and how you feel about that particular dress."
4. "The colored shoe which is no longer giddy, but good."
5. Pale gloves, either white or pastel. They may reach up to the new, shorter sleeve, or be wrist-length.
6. Large, wide-brimmed straw cartwheels, worn with strictly tailored suits.

SHEER, crisp, pure silk taffeta is the fabric used in this frock, a summer-time version of the coat-dress. It is fastened with self-covered buttons from neckline to hem, and its generous collar, cuffs and pocket tabs lend it great dash and charm. Colors are gray or navy blue. It is from the Adele Simpson collection presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co. yesterday in the Terrace Room of the Shoreham Hotel, at the donor tea given by the D. C. Section, National Council of Jewish Women

This New Coffee Flavor Makes Early Morning Angels

It turns Bears into Dears...it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

It brings out the "angel" in the grouchiest early morning grouch! "What's in it?" people ask! The answer is Selecciones! (Pronounced seleck-see-o-nays.) That's Spanish for selected... some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body... others mainly for perfecting flavor.

Yes, the flavor coffees in this mouth-watering new blend are hand-selected 1,—2,—three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, pedigreed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

About Those Fancy Skirts, Fezzes, Thigh-High Tights Evzones Wear and Wear

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE GREEKS are here bearing gifts. But don't beware them as they—the gifts not the Greeks—are strictly token. Just symbols of thanks for the aid we've given their beleaguered country. The dozen 6-foot-plus soldiers from the King's Guard Regiment, the Evzones, will lay wreaths at Mount Vernon, Lincoln Memorial, the Unknown Soldier's Tomb. They will present the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate with vases fashioned by Greek peasant potters.

The fanciest part of the Evzone uniform is the fustanella—or kilt. Since gents in skirts have great allure, a few words about this feminine trifle of masculine attire won't come amiss. Greeks wear kilts for the same reason Scots do—to get about with carefree abandon in rough mountainous country. The origin of the fustanella is lost in antiquity, but it is, so to speak, indigenous of Roumeli, the mountainous midsection of Greece where peasants still wear it everyday. The mustanella Greek soldiers wear may be made from three different kinds of material, khaki for everyday and battle service, white linen for dress and summer, a deep sapphireish blue wool which is used in only the King's Guard Regiment uniform.

The fustanella is made quite differently from the Scotch kilt. It is pleated all around—not in a straight piece as one might imagine but in no less than 400 separate pieces cut in triangles and sewed together, don't ask us how! The fustanella is a yard in length from waist to knee top and it takes no less than 60 yards of material! However, a wool fustanella is liable to last a lifetime, the khaki ones ditto and the linen for quite a spell. Atop the fustanella and beneath the jacket there's a shirt with pleated sleeves which takes 10 yards of cloth to create. Those turned-up toe pom-pomed slippers are called Tsarouchia. They are national footwear, designed primarily for shepherds who guard their flocks on rough, rocky mountain sides. The peasant has his made of pigskin or calf. The snappier ones, used by both men and women, are usually red, edged with black leather, stitched in yellow thread and ornamented with a black wool pom-pom. Don't get the fez, with its waist-length tassel, wrong. It isn't a Turkish fez, because the Turks, when they slipped across the Bosphorus from Asia, merely swiped the headgear worn by the old Byzantines. So the Greeks have every right to it. The Turks, by the way, more practical than the Byzantines, don't go in for—or rather didn't go in for—tassels on fezes.

A final fact. The Scot keeps his nether limbs warm with knee-length woolen stockings. The Greek keeps cosier with almost thigh-high white woolen tights, anchored below knee with trick black tasselled and looped garters. The same seems to go for the Greeks. Some years ago we had the court tailor in Athens whip up an Evzone uniform (for a fancy dress ball, not a projected spying expedition). We gave him carte blanche, saying spare no money or effort to make the uniform completely authentic. After a series of international complications the creation arrived. The tights, garters, the fustanella were all in order but no appropriate underpinning was provided. It's been quite a problem and we are still wondering——

About Keeping Bread in Refrigerator

Kindly advise me if there are any benefits derived from keeping coffee, cake, or bread in the refrigerator. Since these articles are not used frequently, I have been told they will retain their freshness if kept in the refrigerator. Will any food value be lost, if they are kept in this manner?

E. F.

Foods such as coffee, cake and bread stay fresh longer in the refrigerator because the lower temperature reduces evaporation. In the case of the coffee, in addition to slowing the evaporation of the volatile oils, the lower temperature prevents the oils from becoming rancid which further prolongs the fresh flavor. In families where small quantities of these foods are used, it is definitely beneficial to keep them refrigerated to prolong the freshness. No food value is lost.

We have just moved into a new apartment. The floors are parquet. I would like to know what is the best method for washing and waxing parquet floors so they stay new looking.

M. K.

The best way to keep a floor new looking is to keep it always covered with a protective coat of wax. Of course, it depends upon how much wear a floor gets, but at least once a year—possibly twice, the old wax shoud be removed by wiping it with varsol or a good solvent. This will remove both soil and the wax. Then apply several thin, well buffed coats of wax. For this session it is wise to rent an electric waxer so that you can polish to a hard finish. Thus prepared, between times it is necessary to only wipe up and rewax the worn spots. To do this, wipe away the old wax and dirt with a cleaning wax (so labeled) and then apply several thin coats of paste wax, allowing each to dry well and rubbing it to a hard finish. The use of water on floors is to be avoided because it raises and opens the grain, making it necessary to use many coats of wax to return it to its well protected condition.

We are planning to build a new house very soon and want to excavate under a breakfast nook, 8 feet by 8 feet, which would make a small room off from the basement. It is to be used as a "fruit room." It would be on the order of the old-fashioned "cold cellars" where potatoes, apples, onions, etc., could be kept in good condition throughout the winter months, and also to store canned foods. Should this room have a concrete floor like the rest of the basement or a dirt floor? Should there be a window?

M. M. N.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture Farmer's Bulletin No. 1939, natural earth makes a better floor than concrete or brick because a certain amount of moisture is desirable and earth floors are easier to keep damp by occasional sprinkling if this seems necessary. As for windows, the same bulletin says that one window is necessary and two are more desirable for cooling and ventilation. The windows in the storage room should be darkened in order to protect vegetables from light and can be boxed or shaded in such a way to prevent the entrance of light when opened. I suggest you write for the bulletin, as it is a most comprehensive study on the entire subject of home storage of vegetables and fruits. It contains many illustrations and floor plans for both indoor and outdoor storage.

Is there a satisfactory method that I could use to clean a panama hat at home?

L. S. S.

I'm sorry, I know of no safe and really effective method which can be used at home.

I am forced to add my 2 cents worth to this hot-water heater vs. washing machine controversy. In my home in Los Angeles, I have an automatic washing machine which, at the time I bought it last June, used more hot water than any other machine on the market. I also have a 20-gallon hot-water tank. I have no trouble at all with hot water for one washing on the highest water heat of the machine dial. Of course, I must have a full tank to begin with. I suggest to A. W. A. (who wrote you the other day) that if she can get from her tank only one old-type washing machine tub of hot suds and two lukewarm rinses, her hot water tank is not at capacity.

A. M.

Regarding the use of a washing machine with a 20-gallon tank, for about eight months I have used an automatic washing machine with such a heater, and with two adults and a year-old child in the family. The results have been more than satisfactory. I am careful not to do any bathing or otherwise use hot water while the machine is going. Have washed four or five consecutive loads and still had hot water afterwards.

R. H. N.

In your column the other day, A. W. A. advised an old-type wringer washer to the lady who had a 20-gallon hot water tank. We have a 20-gallon tank, too, and I wouldn't be without my semi-automatic washer. I fill the tub with hot water, then rinse in cold and I can do as many washings as I want this way. The 20-gallon tank is perfect with the semi-automatic machine, and the wringer type can't compare with it.

W. F. R.

My husband and I have become interested in Bulgarian cultured milk called "yogurt", which is highly recommended in general health magazines. Where can it be obtained in Washington?

R. M. R.

Yogurt is sold by a number of the stores listed under "Food-Health" in the yellow pages of the telephone book. At least two local restaurants make it and sell it in glasses in which it can be taken home with you. Their telephone numbers are Metropolitan 9582 and District 4081.

Attention E. G. S.: Several readers have written in to tell you where stainless steel baby spoon-and-fork sets may be purchased. E. H., J. B., and E. R. advise that they can be purchased via the catalogs of the two large mail order firms. E. R. says that you can call and place your order through nearby retail stores of one of these firms. S. D. P. says they have been carried by the largest downtown 5c and 10c store (located between G and F sts.). V. M. M. says they can be ordered for $1 a set from a firm located at 4916 Foster ave., Dept. T, Brooklyn 3, N. Y. The forks and spoons have catalin handles in baby blue, pink, or red.

I have a 9x12 Chinese rug which is worn in several spots. It is mainly Chinese blue, with a 12-inch navy border. How can the worn places be repaired? The worn threads are a beige color.

B. H. L.

It is likely that you can improve the appearance and usefulness of the rug by mending it with matching beige yarn. To help you with the task, I suggest that you telephone or write the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and request Farmer's Bulletin No. 1960, "Carpet and Rug Repair." This leaflet tells how to mend different types of worn places, tears and frayed edges in rugs.

Study Exchanges Hailed

Visiting German Women Urge More Good Movies, Students

By Genevieve Reynolds

"We need exchange teachers, exchange students and other groups of young people, and more motion pictures depicting normal, everyday American life to inculcate democracy in Germany," agreed Mrs. Anna Haag, Mrs. Nora Melle and Dr. Agnes Maxsein in an interview yesterday.

They are three of a group of seven native German women from the United States Zone who came to this country to study the role of American women in their community and national affairs. Their visit to this country under the Army's Reorientation Program is being sponsored by the Carrie Chapman Catt Memorial Fund. The fund was created by the League of Women Voters to enable the women of the United States to share their knowledge and experience with women of other nations.

Voters League Guests

While in Washington the visitors will be house guests of members of the League of Women Voters. Also, league members will take the German women on a round of informative sessions in government departments, the U. S. Senate, Supreme Court and other democratic institutions.

"The Hollywood version is not real American life, I have found," said Dr. Maxsein in fluent English. "Germans should know the natural, family life."

Dr. Maxsein who was elected to the Berlin City Assembly in 1948, represents the Christian Democratic Party at its National Party Council in Frankfurt. In 1945 she was appointed a director of a coeducational gymnasium. Also she is a member of the board of trustees of the 'Hoschule fuer Politik"—a nonpartisan school that reopened in January, 1949.

The Greatest Problem

"The greatest education problem in Germany is the mental and material reorganization of the schools," she explained. "Classes are overcrowded—100 in most of them—and are running on three shifts.

"Many students have no shoes, no room to prepare their homework, no books, pencils or paper," she continued. "That situation has improved some. But we still have a great shortage of teachers."

Dr. Maxsein led the fight to retain private schools in Germany. She believes parents should have some choice in selection of schools for their children and that all schools should not be State-run and controlled.

Blonde, blue-eyed Mrs. Melle, who was a delegate to the Berlin City Assembly from 1946 to 1948, represented the Liberal-Democratic Party. In 1945 she was the women's chairman of the party in the Eastern Zone of Germany and Berlin, but resigned after the Communists formed the Volkskongress. However, she's still an active worker in the party of West Berlin. Four times she was imprisoned by the Nazis between 1933 and 1945.

She was the founder and first vice president of the "Notgemeinschraft 1947 of Berlin, a nonpartisan, progressive women's organization training women for citizenship. When she organized the group, she wrote to women's organizations throughout the world for information and they responded with tons of literature. Upon returning to Berlin, she hopes to organize a group similar to the League of Women Voters, which will serve as a parent organization for leagues throughout Germany and Europe. At present she cannot organize any group outside the United States zone in Berlin."

Politics in Daily Life

"Since the Berlin blockade, women have become more and more interested in politics and government," said Mrs. Mello. "At first life was so difficult just to eke out food and clothing that the German women could not be interested in politics.

"In their daily experiences the German women have learned a great deal about democracy and practical politics," she continued. "However, they have little formal education in democracy due to the lack of newsprint, magazines and newspapers."

As for the Berlin airlift, Mrs. Melle describes as a "wonderful performance," pointing out that women particularly are grateful because they bear the domestic hardships."

On the Town

In the spring a young man's fancy can do what it dadblamed pleases, so far as Basil Fomeen is concerned. To the affable Congo Room (Carlton Hotel) orchestra leader, it only means that summer can't be far behind.

June Powers

Fomeen wound up a fast set the other night—a rather balmy evening, as we recall—and crossed over to this department's table. Sagging into a chair and mopping his brow, he uttered that heartfelt remark common to residents of this area:

"Washington has the worst weather in the world."

Now, Basil Fomeen is a much-traveled man, a musician who has squeezed his accordian in many extreme climes. He was in India, for instance, with the USO during the war, a place where not even mad dogs go out in the noonday sun. Why, then, single out Washington? he was asked.

"We played here last summer," he replied, with the air of a man who could never forget. And since that simple statement seemed conclusive, he mopped his brow once again and made for the bandstand. In a minute the floor was crowded with dancers, none of whom looked the least wilted.

Neither did Fomeen, for that matter, up there on the bandstand. But summer's on the way, folks. You have Fomeen's word for it.

Stefan, the room's headwaiter, had something else on his mind. Back in August of '45, his two youngsters, Sofia and Dolores Kaminski, won the healthiest children contest at Columbia Recreation Center.

June Powers, whose blonde tresses are on view in today's column, opened at the Casino Royal last night in her "exotic bird dance"—a bit of terpsichore that must be seen to be appreciated.

Also on the Casino bill are Virginia and Gene Miller in some tap-dancing variations, and Betty Percy, puppeteer par excellent.

The Lotus is featuring this week a pair of fast-stepping young lasses—the Wong Sisters—in an energetic combination of jitterbug and acrobatics. Ramos and Nanette, a smooth dance team, and Victor Dester, whose juggling is dexterity itself, round out the bill.

ROBERT P. JORDAN.

$1,739,000,000 Spent on Travel

By the United Press

Americans spent $1,739,000,000 on inter-city travel by bus, railroad and airline last year, a survey by the Air Transport Association shows.

While that was two per cent more than spent in 1947, travel volume declined, the difference being accounted for by increased fares.

In this falling market, the airlines increased their share of the combined railroad Pullman-airline travel volume. They captured 34.38 per cent of the market, a 1.48 per cent gain over 1947.

A major conclusion from the survey was that private automobiles are regaining prewar dominance in inter-city travel. Last year about 82 per cent of all such travel was by private car compared with 86.8 per cent before the war. Railroads, airlines and buses split the remainder.

Lack of Fund Support May Put End to Oscar

Hollywood, March 29 (U.P.)—Movie stars toted home Oscars this year perhaps for the last time because their studio bosses so far refuse to foot the bill for any more Academy Award presentations, Academy President Jean Hersholt revealed today.

Hersholt tabbed the complainers merely as "home office executives of four studios in New York."

Lima Gets First Rain In Over Five Years

Lima, Peru, March 28 (U.P.)—It rained in Lima today for the first time in more than five years.

The government weather station said .8 of an inch fell during a two-hour shower, the heaviest rain in the 20 years official records have been kept.

Three Men Drift All Night on Bay In Disabled Craft

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—Three suburbanites were safely home today after being adrift 29 hours in Chesapeake Bay.

They set out Sunday from Rock Hall, Md., to cross Chesapeake Bay. They were brought ashore last night near the mouth of the Gunpowder River, several miles off course.

Roy Young, H. O. Blackwood, and Joseph Aspinall had gone to Rock Hall to get a power boat which Young was having built.

The motor failed in the middle of the bay, and the party drifted helplessly in heavy seas.

Britain Will Not Send Negro GIs' Children to U. S.

London, March 29 (AP).—Britain has decided against sending 31 Somerset County children of American Negro GI's to America for adoption.

Negro families in the United States had agreed to adopt the children but the Home Office ruled today there would be no change in laws which would prohibit them from going.

The Home Office said "any implication that there is not a place in this country for colored children who have not a normal life would cause controversy and give offense in some quarters."

The children are now charges of the Somerset County Council and are in a nursing home until they reach the age of 5. The council plans to place them in British homes.

Paris, March 29 (UP).—A New York furrier said today he negotiated a contract for one-third of Russia's squirrel skin exports by giving the Russians his formula for making a bargain-basement squirrel coat look like a Park Avenue mink.

Lou Nieranberg, just back from a three-week trip to Moscow, said his formula helped put over his deal with the Russian fur trust. He said it would bring him about two million dollars worth of Soviet squirrel skins during the coming year and even more during the following four years.

Maryland Senate Passes 16-Million Bond Bill

The budget bill contained $23,539,300 for buildings at mental hospitals and tuberculosis sanitoria. That money comes from the State surplus. The $16,393,000 measure is to cover building projects not included in the budget.

The Senate vote was 29-0.

Sunday to Sunday

I love you every Sunday, dear . . . And every Monday, too . . . On Tuesday I adore you and . . . My heart belongs to you . . . I cherish you on Wednesday and . . . when Thursday takes its place . . . While Friday, dear, and Saturday . . . I live for your embrace . . . And yet not all the seven days . . . Of every week we share . . . Are long enough for me to tell . . . How much I really care . . . Or any month or season or . . . Whatever moon may be . . . Nor are the years that multiply . . . Into eternity . . . Because my love is boundless as . . . A sea of stars sublime . . . And it is just as endless, dear . . . As are the hands of time.

What's the Verdict

BACK ALIMONY

Q. A wife went from State X to Nevada for a divorce. The decree included an order that the husband pay her $100 a month, until she remarried. For several years the husband paid, then hearing that his former wife was engaged, he stopped sending her monye. She let matters drift for 3½ years, but the second marriage not occurring, she now sues in State X for the back alimony. The husband points out that claims for debt are barred in State X after three years. What will happen?

A. The husband's contention is that State X's three-year "statute of limitations" outlaws the debt, if any. The wife will answer that the Nevada statute of limitations is six years, and that the Nevada law governs, even though the action is in a court of State X. She will win, the laws of the State making a judgment or decree governing as to the time.—F.L.D.

He got a postcard from a photo studio. It informed him that his had been one of the lucky names selected at random from the telephone book for "this month's picture award."

District Liner Drew points out that it takes a good bit of luck to have your name selected at random from the phone book—especially if you have no phone.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I don't know why we read your column; we're not interested in policemen, homeless cats and dogs, or bus drivers.

But since we do read it, let me tell you about the bus stop out our way. We live on Porter st., and can't understand why the stop at Connecticut ave. for westbound buses is about a half-block down into the park. It's windy, gloomy, and often very wet there.

After passing this point, the bus goes to Connecticut ave. and waits for a green light. The drivers aren't supposed to pick up passengers at the corner, but very often kind-hearted drivers permit us to board their vehicles there, and save us 15 or 20 minutes of waiting for the next bus.

I'd like to let them know how much we appreciate their courtesy, even if they are violating regulations to accommodate us.

Professor's Wife.

Dear Madam:

I can't understand why you read this column either. It's plain to see that you're not interested in bus drivers.

Perhaps the professor can evolve a theory.

Bill.

DOMESTIC SCOTCH

The Tru-Blu beer signs disturb Elmer R. Curtis of 335 16th st. se.

His complaint is that the stoplight in the picture shows the red light on top, facing the reader, but the green light is on top, from the side view.

Elmer's contention is that the red light should be on top, regardless of which side of the light you're looking at.

Personally, I wouldn't know. It seems to me that they might be using one light bulb to illuminate both the red light for one direction and the green light for the other. Maybe it's a Scottish invention.

Is any District Liner an expert on these things?

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

Bikini Report Publication Sought

By Drew Pearson

Top American scientists held a private meeting with Secretary of Defense Forrestal shortly before he left office to urge that he publish the full facts regarding the Bikini bomb test — so far withheld from the public.

James Forrestal

The scientists included Dr. Harold Urey of the University of Chicago, one of the originators of the A-bomb; Dr. Karl Compton, former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. David Bradley, author of "No Place to Hide," and W. T. Holliday, president of Standard Oil of Ohio.

Forrestal listened sympathetically, told the scientists that the final Bikini report was on President Truman's desk waiting for him to decide whether it should be published.

This left the matter entirely up to Truman. So after the Forrestal meeting was over, the scientists conferred among themselves as to what they should do about the President.

"It would be most unwise for us to bring any pressure on him," urged Dr. Compton. "Because if you push him, he will just get angry and spiteful and will sit on the report until doomsday."

Regretfully, the other scientists agreed that this was right. Any pressure on Truman to publish the Bikini report would probably make him stubborn, they decided, so they did nothing. Meanwhile, facts which Russian scientists already know about the way the A-bomb makes warships almost a thing of the past, remain a secret from the American people.

Note—Congressional leaders make a similar complaint about Truman. The best way to keep a man in office, they have found, is to show him up as inefficient, following which a perpetual job with Truman is almost guaranteed.

Behind Sales Tax

Behind the current drive for a sales tax in the District of Columbia, Georgia, Indiana and other States is none other than our old friend—the real estate lobby.

Big realty operators, fearful of a boost in property taxes, as well as State income taxes, think they can head this off with a sales tax on consumers.

This is one of the reasons back of the current efforts of reactionary Representative Howard Smith of Virginia and other friends of the real estate lobby to force congressional approval of a sales tax for the District of Columbia.

The House recently rejected a sales tax for the District by a vote of 178 to 166. However, Congressman Smith and his cohorts are keeping at it.

Little Dictator

Speaker Sam Rayburn may have to settle a wide-open revolt in the House Veterans Affairs Committee against the dictatorial capers of Chairman John Rankin of Mississippi. Committee colleagues, led by Representatives Walter Huber of Ohio and Harold Patten of Arizona, are having a showdown with Rankin this week that he must start living up to House rules in the conduct of Veterans Committee meetings.

Hostility against the Mississippi Congressman has been at fever pitch since seven committee members angrily walked out of a meeting on February 15, after Rankin railroaded his veteran pensions bill through the committee without even permitting debate.

Democratic and Republican members also are furious at him for refusing to call another meeting since the February 15 walkout. Urgent legislation is piling up in the committee, including bills to equalize pensions for World War I and II widows and orphans and to adjust disabled veterans benefits to higher living costs. But Rankin has refused to call a committee for a solid month and a half.

Jap Collaborationist

A lot of collaborationists once chummy with Japs and Nazis are quietly easing back into power. Yet the State Department, in whose hands rests the responsibility for keeping the peace, doesn't even seem to know it.

In Washington, for instance, the No. 2 man in the Philippine Embassy is Emilio Abello, "Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of the Philippines." The State Department is supposed to know all about him. That is part of its business.

However, when Richard R. Ely, chief of the State Department's Division of Philippine Affairs, was asked whether Minister Abello had ever been a Jap collaborationist, he answered no.

"If Abello had ever been in prison or anything like that," replied Ely, "We would know about it."

Abello himself was somewhat more frank—after being faced with the evidence. He admitted that he had been jailed for four months by General MacArthur as a collaborationist, but was released when the jails were taken over by the Filipinos.
